1. WELCOME
GREETINGS FROM THE MSC COURSE DIRECTOR

To all new students for the Master of Science in Refugee and Forced Migration Studies

Welcome to Oxford, to the Refugee Studies Centre (RSC), and to the Department of International Development (ODID). This handbook is designed to be your primary source of reference for all matters relating to the MSc in Refugee and Forced Migration Studies in 2023-4.

At the end of 2022, UNHCR estimated that 108.4 million people were forcibly displaced worldwide. Events in places like Afghanistan, Sudan, and Libya add daily to these numbers. Yet the political will to respond to, and meet the needs of refugees and other forced migrants, is in many places declining. States continue to engage in populist rhetoric and restrictionist policies, with significant consequences for refugees and their human rights. Scholarship, intellectual engagement, and leadership in relation to forced migration are, therefore, needed more than ever.

The past few years have been extraordinary in many respects. Many of us have experienced periods of separation from our friends and families, disruption to our work and education and restrictions on our ability to move and interact with each other. For these and a whole host of other reasons, you may be starting the new academic year with a sense of trepidation, as well as of excitement, uncertain of what the next few weeks and months may hold. But let me assure you that the Refugee Studies Centre is an extraordinary place to be. Together, we will engage with these tricky global issues and acquire a wide range of knowledge and skills from the degree. The RSC is a particularly wonderful place to study because of the people who make it up, each contributing to a collaborative and vibrant intellectual and social life.

In the pages that follow we set out how we intend to provide you with an enriching and exciting course of study for the next year, providing some crucial information that you can use as a reference point during your studies.

During this nine-month course you will, for example, be introduced to a number of perspectives that will both broaden and deepen your understanding of forced migration. Our teaching remains grounded in a multi-disciplinary approach that includes the perspectives of anthropology, international relations, history, law, politics, and social theory. Taken together, these perspectives will provide you with a rich and diverse training in the social sciences. Another strength of the MSc programme is the individual supervision that we provide to our students. You will be assigned a supervisor at the start of the year and you are expected to meet regularly with them to discuss the essays that you write, your academic progress and your research plans.

Another wonderful thing about studying in Oxford is its libraries. The Social Sciences Library on Manor Road contains the RSC’s collection, the world’s largest unpublished collection of literature in refugee and forced migration studies. The Social Science Library also contains an excellent collection of books on conflict, development, forced migration, humanitarianism, politics and international relations. The Law Library in the St Cross Building similarly contains a wealth of international and comparative legal materials. Then there is the historical core of the Bodleian library, which, as a legal deposit library, holds every book published in the UK. This library has many beautiful reading rooms, historical buildings, and a wealth of archival materials. You can study under the spacious dome of the Upper Radcliffe Camera, or read alongside the creaky medieval bookshelves of Duke Humfrey’s Library.

To help us work together, and to be the contact point between us in course-related matters, I would like to encourage you to identify three fellow MSc students to be your Student Representatives. One of these representatives will take on the role of Social Secretary and organise events for the group. I will meet with the three representatives at the end of each term, to see how things are going. In addition, if you have any questions about the course or need advice about your studies, you can speak to your supervisor or contact me directly - either by emailing to arrange an appointment or by popping up to my office on Monday morning at 9-10am during term time, which will be my office hours.
Finally, our MSc is more than a course of study. It is about people; it is about you. I would encourage you to engage with the wealth of social and cultural activities that Oxford, the University and the city, has to offer. Your college will also provide you with an opportunity to meet people from many different fields of study. Take the time to share experiences with them. You never know what connections you might make and what you might learn.

I wish you well and hope you find your time with us challenging, exciting and fulfilling.

Warm wishes,

Catherine Briddick
Associate Professor in Gender and International Human Rights and Refugee Law
MSc in Refugee and Forced Migration Studies Course Director, 2023-24
WELCOME FROM LAST YEAR’S CLASS

Dear incoming Refugee and Forced Migration Studies class:

The 2022-2023 Refugee and Forced Migration Studies cohort would like to welcome you to Oxford University, the Department of International Development, and the Refugee Studies Centre!

Speaking from experience, we have no doubt that your time at Oxford will be intellectually stimulating and personally enriching. The RFMS course – from lectures and readings to informal discussions – will challenge you academically and encourage you to produce quality scholarly research. However, the course is not only a space for learning; it also fosters friendships, support networks, and mentorships. Work hard, but also have fun and support each other.

Because the course is only nine months, it is intense and demanding from the start. While you may feel overwhelmed, the course is as manageable as it is rigorous. Here is some advice keep in mind as you begin:

● Take time for yourself: being a student at Oxford is more than studying – it’s a time for personal development and exploration. Your work will benefit from mindful breaks. Everyone has different ways of studying, so avoid comparing yourself with others and don’t feel guilty turning down academic or social activities when you need to. Oxford boasts beautiful parks and gardens that are worth exploring – there is more to the Oxford landscape than the inside of seminar rooms, especially when the sun is out.

● Know you deserve to be here: sometimes looking around the room between the faculty and your peers can feel intimidating. The admission committee does not make mistakes: you have earned your place here. Remember that you deserve to be in the room and that your opinions are always an added value to the discussion, even (or especially) if you’re going against the grain. Please share your thoughts and ask your questions, there are genuinely no silly ones! Your instructors are also there to support you, so reach out to them.

● Work as a team: this course encourages you to work with your peers, who have diverse perspectives and insights from their academic and professional experiences. We found success and fun in creating reading groups, sharing notes, discussing essay topics, and keeping each other company in the library. While you must produce original examination papers, it can be helpful to prepare for exams in groups, for example practising writing, or talking over past papers. Your course mates are also your strongest support network; during stressful moments, be sure to take breaks and talk through challenges – you’ll quickly realise you are not alone. We would recommend working collectively on readings; booking study spaces together during thesis writing; and setting up a Whatsapp group right from the start to arrange social gatherings and study groups.

● Be strategic with readings: the reading lists are daunting. You will naturally get the most out of class discussions if you do the required readings, but for the additional readings, select what interests and challenges you most. As you typically need to revise four topics per course, it is okay to have a few weeks in which you have skipped a reading or two, although try to avoid this with the early foundational readings (especially in law!) Additional readings—including those you find on your own—will be useful for the formative essays and exam preparation. Also, be critical of the reading list and suggest additional texts to your tutors and peers. Ultimately, long as you understand the content and can effectively speak about it, then you’ll be fine! Take comfort in the fact that if you complete the summative assignments, it would be hard to fail.
Study selectively for the assessments: remember to answer the question instead of showing off your knowledge on a certain topic. Remember that you will not be examined on every week of material, so strategise and focus additional time on those weeks that you find most interesting. At the beginning of the term, map out strong and weak weeks in each course. Look at old exam questions early on – while they change every year, they provide an idea of what to expect. A sure-fire way to be in a good position on the assessment day is to revise select weeks, but to have prepared essay plans on the topics you do intend to answer. For international students – familiarise yourself with the British marking system and stylistic standards early on – your supervisor and classmates are a great resource for this!

Don’t sweat, but don’t slack on the formative essays: they not formally graded, instead intended to help you work through ideas and arguments on paper. While they do not count towards your final marks, putting effort into the formative essays from the beginning will inevitably help you in both the exams and thesis and to process the course material. Questions asked for the formative essays may be similar in theme and will require the same skills as those asked in the exams. If you intend to apply for the DPhil, the department may request your formative grades.

For your thesis, learn what works best for you and stick with it: with the immediacy of coursework, the thesis may be the furthest thing from your mind at the start of the year. You may have come into this program knowing exactly what you want to research; alternatively, you may have no idea. Either (or somewhere in between) is perfectly okay. Keep a journal to track your ideas; writing down and working through your ideas is an extremely important part of the process. Your supervisor will provide more specific feedback once you articulate your ideas on paper. Being proactive does not mean rushing: it is equally important to be patient and to take your time exploring topics to find something you are excited about. Also keep in mind that the process is different for everyone and comparing your pace to your peers’ can be more distressing than helpful. Your supervisor is your primary point of contact for your thesis, but other faculty - inside and outside the RSC - may also be able to share valuable insights with you on your topic, research and writing process.

Attend additional talks: in addition to course lectures, try to make time for a few additional talks when possible. The weekly Refugee Studies Centre Seminar Series is terrific and amazing talks also take place outside the department. You may choose to attend seminars that might help your thesis research or you may find it refreshing to hear about unrelated topics to broaden your perspective. Look out for the email you’ll receive at the beginning of each week from ODID summarising talks in Oxford you may be interested in.

Make use of both breaks: take real and well-deserved time off during both breaks, but also make good use of the time away from classes. During the first break, catch up on readings that fell through the cracks during the term, consider starting to revise material for exams, and dedicate some time to your thesis. During the second break, focus on exam revision but also work on your thesis if possible. Create a schedule to keep yourself on track for exam revision.

Enjoy stepping out of your comfort zone with coursework: you may have never taken a course in one of the subjects (law, ethics, or anthropology, for instance), but don’t let that intimidate you. In fact, looking back, these were among the most exciting and enriching courses.

Take advantage of the resources at your fingertips: your lecturers are your greatest resource. You will be learning from some of the leading scholars in the field. Take advantage of this! Beyond your supervisor, other professors could provide valuable input on your thesis research or your future career path. Lecturers are approachable and are willing to meet with you one-on-one if you ask. This year is an opportunity to form mentorships and to seek advice from the very scholars whose books we read in class.
● Enjoy yourself: Oxford can be overwhelming. Don’t forget that there is a reason you are here and that if people appear to find it easy, they are only good actors. Try to stay composed while doing what you can, speak to as many people as possible, take care of yourself, and remember that before you know it, the year will have passed.

● Course socials: getting together as a course is so important, especially in the first few weeks when getting to know each other. Course events are also a great way to celebrate the amazing achievements and milestones you’ll reach over the next nine months. Each year, there are typically two students (we definitely recommend at least two!) from the cohort who represent you as social reps, working with a small budget to host events both in and out of the department. Christmas events at the end of first term have been a highlight. We’ve also done smaller and more casual events such as potlucks, pub nights, board games, and dinners! The course brings together so many wonderful people and we found our cohort to be a much-needed support network, so make the most of it.

P.S. Reach out to the Migration Studies course reps as well and do some joint socials, you’ll already have a lot in common!

Have a fantastic year!

Refugee and Forced Migration Studies Class of 2023
OVERVIEW OF DEGREE ADMINISTRATION

Teaching Committee (TC)
The MSc RFMS Teaching Committee meets every term. It deals with matters related to the MSc degree programme such as the organisation and content of teaching, policy, examination performance, staff and personnel, equipment, scheduling, publicity, and funding.

Student Consultative Committee (SCC)
During induction week, students are asked to nominate 2-3 fellow MSc students to be their Student Representatives.

SCC meetings are scheduled every term. These meetings serve as a forum for discussing students’ reactions to the course as well as other related issues – student representatives can put forward ideas from their fellow students and are expected to pass back any points of interest that are discussed in the meetings. The SCC also deals with student issues related to theses and examinations. The meetings are chaired by the Course Director.

Graduate Studies Committee (GSC)
Responsibility for the programme is vested in the Graduate Studies Committee of the Department of International Development, which reports to the Social Sciences Division. The Divisional board has formal responsibility for the maintenance of educational quality and standards in its broad subject area and exercises its responsibility through its Academic Committee, which scrutinises proposed course revisions, reports of examiners, and other questions of academic policy. The ODID Graduate Studies Committee meets twice per term. At the University level, the Education Committee is responsible for matters of academic policy. Their website is: http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/epsc/.

Your College
All students are full-time, matriculated college members. The colleges have no formal role in graduate teaching, but all students have college advisors who can discuss both personal and academic matters.

Please note that the academic side of graduate education is the primary responsibility of the University and your department, with colleges in a secondary role.

Some colleges host a wide range of general seminar series in the field of politics, international relations, and area studies. They also have active cross-disciplinary, and cross-area postgraduate student discussion groups. These provide additional networks for informal learning and networking.

Refugee Led Research Hub

The Refugee-Led Research Hub (RLRH) is an initiative run by the RSC and the British Institute in Nairobi. It provides support to scholars who have been affected by forced displacement to advance an agenda for refugee-authored scholarship and research in the field of Forced Migration Studies. It achieves this by (1) supporting displaced scholars and researchers to participate meaningfully in research; (2) enabling refugees to develop research and research-related careers; and (3) developing a participatory and co-designed approach to the social sciences and humanities. The hub’s Oxford-based staff are:

2. SCHEDULES
TERMLY OVERVIEW OF CORE CLASSES AND SEMINARS

These schedules are provided to give an overview only of the classes and seminars running in each of the three terms. Final timetables will be published on CANVAS at the start of each term.

The full and final timetable for Michaelmas Term, including room locations and additional meetings and workshops will be provided separately on CANVAS as both a termly overview and a weekly calendar in Induction Week.

MICHAELMAS TERM 2023

Students will attend four core courses (International Human Rights and Refugee Law, Anthropology of Forced Migration, Politics of Forced Migration and Research Methods I).

The term will commence with a mini-module, Conceptualising and Historicising the Study of Forced Migration. Students will also be given the opportunity to attend a variety of academic enrichment events.

HILARY TERM 2024

The Hilary Term timetable will be published on CANVAS prior to the start of the term. However, students will again attend four courses: two core courses (Research Methods II and Movement and Morality) plus the two option courses they signed up to in Michaelmas Term.

TRINITY TERM 2024

There are no taught courses in Trinity term, as this term is spent doing the open book exams (in week 1/2) and writing your thesis. There will, however be one-off events such as thesis workshops and other events taking place during the term, in addition to the regular RSC seminar series.
OVERVIEW OF KEY DATES AND DEADLINES

NOTE: It is essential that submission deadlines are adhered to exactly. Late submission requests have to be approved by the Proctors. Failure to hand in submissions by the deadline may result in failure to complete.

3. THE DEGREE
AIMS AND OBJECTIVES OF THE DEGREE

The course aims to offer you an understanding of the complex and varied nature of forced migration and refugee populations, of their centrality to global, regional and national processes of political, social and economic change. It will also help you develop a broad understanding of academic research related to forced migration and refugees, as well as critical thinking and sound evaluative tools.

Teaching programme and lecture lists

Oxford University operates a three-term academic year. Each term consists of Weeks 1 - 8 of classes. In addition, in Michaelmas Term, Week 0 is a time when introductory meetings take place; and Weeks 9 and 10 after Trinity Term are when exam marking and final examination board meetings take place.

As members of the University, you may attend most lectures and seminars held by the University. Occasionally special lectures may require advance permission to attend. Lecture Lists are available from the University Offices on Wellington Square during Week 0 of each term. A copy is also kept at ODID and they also appear on the University’s website accessed from: http://www.ox.ac.uk/students/academic/lectures/

Aims and objectives

- To help students understand the complex and varied nature of forced migration and refugeehood and their centrality to global, regional and national institutions and processes of political, legal, social and economic change.
- To contribute to a better understanding of the rights and entitlements of forcibly displaced people.
- To gain a broad understanding of the literature on forced migration and refugees.
- To contribute to a better understanding of the various research methodologies and approaches relevant to the field of refugees and forced migration studies.
- To contribute to the development of original thinking, unique research skills and sound evaluative tools.
- To understand the contribution of various social science disciplines to the study of refugees and forced migration.

Programme outcomes

A. Students will develop a knowledge and understanding of:
   - Key theories of migration as they relate to the complex processes and causes of forced migration and refugee flows.
   - Global processes of social, economic and political change.
   - Ethical, political and sociological issues associated with responses to forcibly displaced people.
   - The nature of the international human rights and refugee regime, international law related to refugees, and associated legal and normative frameworks.
   - Research methods, including quantitative, qualitative and participatory techniques and research designs relevant to the study of refugees and forced migration.
   - The historical evolution of responses to refugees, asylum seekers and other forced migrants.

B. Skills and other attributes

Students have the opportunity to develop the following skills during the course:
I. Intellectual skills

- The ability to undertake critical analysis of key research (particularly in the field of forced migration and in relation to refugees).
- The ability to identify the major ethical, political, legal and sociological issues raised by forced migration.
- The ability to plan and organise empirical research into aspects of forced migration and refugee studies, and the construction of a 10-15,000 word thesis.
- Familiarity with the needs and rights of refugees and other forced migrants and to contribute to academic and practitioner dialogues in the field of humanitarian aid and forced migration policy.
- The ability to contribute new perspectives to forced migration and the study of refugee issues using a combination of theoretical and practical approaches.

II. Transferable skills

- Independent learning.
- Critical analysis.
- Presentational and writing skills.
- A range of research and information technology skills.
- Time management skills.

Related teaching/learning methods and strategies

Teaching on the MSc will, following the flexible and inclusive approach to teaching (FIT) that the University has adopted and have a strong focus on small-group teaching, complemented by online pre-recorded lectures. This model of teaching allows flexibility around when and how students and staff engage with each other, and ensures that ‘real time’ and, where possible, in-person contact, occurs at the point(s) which add the most to your learning.

Students are expected to prepare for each taught element or essay by reading a selection of recommended book chapters, articles and working papers. Teaching staff specifically refer to exemplary studies in forced migration and the literature on refugees to illustrate important theoretical, ethical, methodological and practical issues and whenever possible, involve students in aspects of their own research activity.

Assessment

Course assessment is made up of six elements: a Research Design Essay for research methods, a thesis, two core course examination papers and two option course papers (either examination or essay). These summative assessments measure the extent to which students are able to demonstrate knowledge and understanding of the points outlined above. The process and production of the Research Design Essay will assess the students’ ability to plan and apply the research techniques they have learned. The assessment of the thesis measures the individual student’s ability to work independently and with sustained analytical focus on a multi-disciplinary issue related to refugees and forced migration.

Formative assessment provides regular feedback on progress. This is complemented through feedback provided in supervision meetings and seminars. The provision of ongoing feedback allows for comment on individual strengths and weaknesses and allows for identification of any student requiring additional support.
STRUCTURE OF THE DEGREE AND TEACHING PROGRAMME

The MSc in Refugee and Forced Migration Studies offers four core courses in Michaelmas term; in Hilary term, students undertake two further core courses, as well as choosing two additional courses from a list of options. The core courses offered on the MSc feed into either Paper I (International Legal and Normative Frameworks) or Paper II (Political and Anthropological Frameworks). Option courses are assessed either by an in-person examination or an essay. Research Methods is assessed by means of a research design essay.

CORE COURSES

In Michaelmas Term the following courses are provided, which you are expected to attend in their entirety:

- International Human Rights and Refugee Law I (taught by Catherine Briddick)
- The Anthropology of Forced Migration (taught by Naohiko Omata)
- The Politics of Forced Migration (taught by Matthew Gibney and Tom Scott-Smith)
- Research Methods (Part I) (taught by Uttara Shahani and Emma Walker-Silverman)

In Hilary Term students on the MSc in Refugee and Forced Migration Studies must undertake four courses, two of which must be:

- Movement and Morality (taught by Matthew Gibney)
- Research Methods (Part II) (taught by Carlos Vargas-Silva)

Formative work

As part of these courses students are usually expected to present essays of approximately 1,500 words in length (see FORMATIVE ESSAYS). There will be one essay for each of the core courses, (except Research Methods), and one essay based on the introductory module Historicising the Study of Forced Migration at the start of Michaelmas. Essays will be assessed by the appropriate course lecturers, except the first essay in Michaelmas, which is assessed by your supervisor. You may also be required to write an essay for the option courses you choose in Hilary term.

CORE COURSE OUTLINES

The Anthropology of Forced Migration (Naohiko Omata) [Michaelmas]

This course explores the lived experiences of forced migrants through an anthropological lens. It explores how refugees’ identity as well as notions of home and belonging have been affected by displacement, investigates the social and economic lives of refugees, and examines how they interact with UNHCR, aid agencies and host governments. The course is structured as an investigation of the archetypal stages of forced migration: human movement, life in camps, interaction with relief agencies, making a living, claiming asylum, and then return and resettlement. Each week will be taught through close reading of first-hand ethnographic materials, combined with lectures, class discussions, guest talks, and workshops.

International Human Rights and Refugee Law I (Catherine Briddick) [Michaelmas]

This course covers the core issues in international refugee law and international human rights law that define the scope of international protection. It focuses on the definition of a refugee under the 1951 Refugee Convention and pursuant to regional instruments and agreements. It also explores the role of human rights law in offering protection to refugees and other ‘forced migrants’.
Overall, the course provides students with a critical understanding of the content, workings, and shortcomings of international legal responses to refugees, so that by the end of the term, students will understand both the potential, and the limits, of this body of law. By engaging with the readings, lectures, and class activities, students will also develop their abilities in legal analysis, synthesis, and argumentation. Finally, the course is cumulative, building week on week, and moving across regions, to provide a comprehensive overview of the international protection regime. The introductory weeks will, therefore, raise issues that will be returned to throughout the course (and in the advanced law option, should students choose to undertake it) with students gaining greater understanding and insight as the term (and year) progresses.

The Politics of Forced Migration (Matthew Gibney and Tom Scott-Smith) [Michaelmas]

Forced migration is inherently political. Its causes, consequences, and responses to it cannot be understood without looking at the role of power, interests, and ideas. The movement of people across communities, especially when forced, necessarily leads to competing claims and political conflicts. In order to understand both the significance of forced migration and the tensions it generates, an analysis of both historical events and political ideas is essential. This course is divided into two substantive sections. The first four weeks look at the drivers of forced migration, focusing on central causes of displacement: authoritarianism, colonialism, disorder and capitalism. The second four weeks looks at key political responses to forced migration, focusing in particular on hospitality, humanitarianism, control and resistance. Each week we will draw upon an empirical case study that illustrates the topic. These are often historical, to give us the benefit of a rich scholarly literature and to facilitate deeper analysis. After outlining some of the key debates surrounding each topic, we will then read the work of political or social theorists to develop our understanding of the topic and provide a platform for discussion in seminars.

Movement and Morality (Matthew Gibney) [Hilary]

Human movement across borders raises complex moral questions. States, humanitarian organisations, and individuals often justify their various positions on immigration and refugee movements on moral grounds. This course aims to explore a range of moral issues raised by contemporary border controls. We critically consider questions such as: whether people should have the right to move freely between states; whether states should be allowed to trade responsibility for refugees amongst themselves; under what, if any, circumstances disobeying or resisting immigration controls might be justifiable; whether states have a duty to grant admission to non-citizens from countries they have formerly colonized; and if it is morally acceptable to denationalize and deport citizen terrorists. These questions raise controversial and contested issues. We will map the contours of these lively and important debates and identify the positions that we find the strongest. By the end of this course students should have gained a greater awareness of the moral controversies that underpin contemporary debates on border control; an improved understanding of why actors use moral arguments as a resource in political debates; and an introduction to some key debates in moral and political theory.

Research Methods I (Uttara Shahani and Emma Walker-Silverman) [Michaelmas]
Research Methods II (Carlos Vargas-Silva) [Hilary]

How can scholars research forced migration in ways that are responsible, ethical, and valuable? How should we identify the most appropriate methodologies for our research? This course examines these questions, with the aim of developing essential skills for understanding the ethics and complexities around research related to forced migration. The course is presented over two terms. In Michaelmas term (Part 1), the focus is on qualitative methodologies, research design, and data collection. These topics are covered through a combination of broad conceptual and theoretical discussions, alongside specific case studies of ‘research in practice’.

In Hilary term (Part 2), lectures and classes will turn to quantitative data analysis, led by Carlos Vargas-Silva. The discussion will include aspects related to sampling different populations in the humanitarian context, developing questionnaires and analysing the collected data. There will also be discussion about ways of ‘mixing’ these quantitative techniques with the qualitative methods introduced in Part 1.
OPTIONS COURSES [Hilary Term]

The remaining two courses in Hilary Term will be chosen by the student from a list of options. The Home pool options for 2023-24 are:

- Climate Action and Displacement (Sarah Rosenberg-Jansen)
- Comparative Perspectives of Refugee Resettlement (Molly Fee)
- Dispossession and Displacement in the Modern Middle East (Dawn Chatty, based at Oriental Studies)
- Education in Uncertainty (Hiba Salem)
- International Human Rights and Refugee Law II (Catherine Briddick)
- Postcolonial Borders and Forced Migration (Uttara Shahani)
- Refugee Economies (Naohiko Omata)
- Refugee Voices (Ashwiny Kistnareddy)

There will also be a pool of options from the other four ODID degrees to choose from. Students will have to make their first option choice from the Home Pool only, but the second option choice can be selected from the departmental shared options list. The availability of any particular options course will be dependent on numbers and with regard to other degree’s options, compatible timetabling. Students should be aware that if they choose an option external to the RFMS degree, they will be assessed in the mode and timeframe as set by the owning degree. This may mean, for example, sitting an examination in week 8 of Trinity in the same week that the thesis is due.

Descriptions of the Home Pool courses can be found below, and the students will be presented with more information on the available options in Induction Week, and will need to make their final choices by beginning of Week 2.

The first option course sign up window will be between 0900 and 1200 on Friday of week 1 (13 October)

The second option course sign up window will be between the afternoon of Friday 13 October and 0900 on Monday of week 2 (16 October)

All options, except International Human Rights and Refugee Law II (which is uncapped), will usually be capped at 10 students and where students signing up exceed the cap, places will be allocated randomly using an Excel formula. You may, therefore, find that your first choice is not available and so you will be allocated your second choice. You will be informed of what course you have managed to get a place on for your first choice before you have to select your second choice.

Please note it is possible a course could be cancelled if not enough people sign up for it.

Short videos given by Option Conveners, together with draft course outlines and indicative reading lists, will be placed on Canvas at the start of Induction week giving you two weeks to make your choice. Students are welcome to contact the conveners directly if they have any questions.
OPTIONS COURSE OUTLINES

Climate Action and Displacement (Sarah Rosenberg-Jansen)

The ‘Climate Action and Displacement’ course considers how climate policy is framed within international humanitarian responses and the global refugee regime. The course considers the notion that UN humanitarian organisations are addressing the climate crisis in situations of forced displacement, questioning whether the UN is fit for purpose in responding to rising global carbon emissions and considering how humanitarian agencies are reducing the emissions they create. To do this, the option course will focus on a different element of climate and forced displacement each week – assessing humanitarian institutions, the international refugee regime and climate policy, sustainable responses to energy, and refugee inclusion in climate debates. In the second half of the course, we turn to consider academic-activist debates and the role of decolonial approaches in addressing climate change within forced migration settings – hearing from refugees and activists directly on how climate and energy access issues impact them.

The course lectures will be delivered by innovative ‘In Conversation With’ discussions with practitioners, leading academics, displaced people, and policymakers. These conversations will be pre-recorded and uploaded onto Canvas to allow students to listen to expert opinions ahead of weekly seminar discussions. This option course draws on scholarship from a range of disciplines to examine the interactions of the climate crisis, climate-induced displacement, and sustainable humanitarian response. The course offers students to engage in practical responses to climate change within the humanitarian system, as well as grounding these responses within intellectual debates. The assessment will be in the form of a 3,000-word essay.

Comparative Perspectives of Refugee Resettlement

This course will problematize and explore refugee resettlement as a durable solution. Using comparative perspectives, the weekly topics will draw on examples from a diversity of countries of origin and resettlement to address issues central to refugees’ wellbeing. By addressing the weekly topics, students will develop a stronger understanding of the policies and programmatic dilemmas central to resettlement as well as the complexities faced by refugees as they seek to build a life in the resettlement destination. Students will engage their analytic skills to think about how policy is translated into the everyday practice of resettlement and its effects on the lives of newly arrived refugees. As students engage with the literature on refugee resettlement, they will also consider policy documents from different countries of resettlement. The assessment will be in the form of a 3,000-word essay.

Education in Uncertainty (Hiba Salem)

This optional course introduces the field of education in contexts of forced displacement and focuses on the links between education, migration, and the shifting interests of nation-states, exploring the ways in which young people’s aspirations sit within these intersections. It will begin by examining how education as a response to displacement has emerged, and the politics and tensions that govern education structures and practices today. By engaging with case studies across varying forms of displacement - covering different geographical, temporal, and legal factors - this course will then examine young people’s aspirations and explore how they negotiate the disjuncture between the promised merits of education and the realities of everyday structures. Drawing on these studies, the course considers the role of meaningful education in supporting young people’s navigation of uncertainty. The assessment will be in the form of a 3,000-word essay.
International Human Rights and Refugee Law II (Catherine Briddick)

This advanced law option provides students with a deeper and more nuanced understanding of the law on international protection.

The course commences by considering how refugees are recognised as such, before examining legal questions relating to exclusion from refugee status and cessation of refugee status. These topics are followed by an examination of key refugee rights, including in relation to non-penalisation and freedom of movement. Finally, we consider the relationships between IRL and other areas of law, including International Humanitarian Law, Trans-national Criminal Law (in relation to trafficking) and the Law of the Sea.

Postcolonial Borders and Forced Migration (Uttara Shahani)

This course explores the relationship between forced migration and borders across the colonial-postcolonial divide from a historical perspective. It situates contemporary borders in colonial history. It investigates the intersection of race with colonial migration controls and how these controls configured the boundaries of the modern nation-state. We consider how colonialism aligned national populations with political borders, alongside population transfer, mass deportation, forcible denationalisation, and partition. Concurrently, the course considers how anti-colonial nationalisms and decolonisation led to the making of new-nation states that made new refugees. The course reflects on these issues conceptually, with case studies from Africa, the United States, the Middle East, and Asia.

The course will be delivered through pre-recorded lectures and in-person discussion-based seminars. Students will engage with historical primary sources, podcasts, films, maps, and music. At the end of the course, students should be able to analyse the history of forced migration within a colonial and postcolonial context, understand relevant case studies across a historical and geographical span, and be able to use a historical lens to develop a critical understanding of current issues concerning refugees and forced migration. The assessment will be in the form of a 3,000-word essay.

Refugee Economies (Naohiko Omata)

In this course, we explore the economic lives of refugees in a variety of contexts through systematic and theoretical approaches. The guiding question of the course is: What difference does it make, in economic terms, to be a refugee? While refugees engage in economic activities and participate in markets in their host states, their economic lives are shaped by various aspects of ‘refugeehood’ – defined here as the legal, social, political and/or institutional contexts in which refugees find themselves in exile. By examining a range of factors that influence refugees’ economic decisions, strategies, and outcomes, we investigate the ways in which their economic lives are analytically distinct. The course takes an interdisciplinary approach by integrating the work of anthropologists, sociologists, geographers, political scientists, economists, lawyers, and practitioners. The geographical scope is global, covering refugees in both the Global South and Global North. Assessment will be in the form of a 2 hour written examination.

Refugee Voices (Ashwiny Kistnareddy)

This option course focuses on the range of refugee voices emanating from different parts of the world and foregrounding their experiences of forced displacement, detention, waiting in camps and problematic resettlement. The course begins by theorizing speaking and voicing as an essential part of recuperating agency and showcasing the fact that the so-called subaltern can speak and has agency, followed by critical reading of the place of storytelling in refugee studies. The course proposes to analyse a range of media deployed by refugees and on behalf of refugees to recount their experiences and how each genre and form enables the writer/subject to reach their audience and readership in a specific way. Drawing on gender studies, race studies, carceral studies, political theory and literary and genre studies, this course seeks to engage with the heterogeneous experiences of refugees from different geographical regions. The assessment will be in the form of a 3,000-word essay.
FORMATIVE ESSAYS

During the course of Michaelmas and Hilary Terms, you will be asked to write seven short, formative essays. The essays should be approximately 1,500 words in length and deal with the substantive, theoretical and/or methodological aspects of the material covered in each core and options course.

The purpose of these short essays is to hone your analytical skills and to prepare you for the challenge of writing the short, summative essays for your written exams at the start of Trinity Term. They are intended to be an opportunity for students to get constructive feedback from their lecturers, rather than mandatory assessments. The submission deadlines for these are not flexible. You may, in certain circumstances, be permitted an extra day or two, but late submissions will not generally be accepted.

The formative essays, therefore, are intended:

1) To prepare and equip students with a variety of skills required for their summative assessment.
2) To create a good basis for discussion and subsequent subject learning.
3) To give students the opportunity to present a succinct argument.

What makes a good short essay?

- Concision
- Structure
- Clarity
- Evidence
- Acute attention to question
- Theoretical engagement where relevant
- Good argumentation
- Independence of thought
- Awareness of relevant literature and accurate citation

What the short essays are not:

- Literature reviews or summaries – they must contain an argument!
- A general discussion of an issue – they must stay focused on the question!
- In need of an extensive bibliography.

Your course lecturer and supervisor will expect your essay to be a well-written piece of analytical work which is based on, perhaps, half a dozen or so readings around a specific topic. The topic may have been one of the discussion topics of the course outline, or it may have been one which has been specifically assigned in class. Alternatively it may have been a question from a previous year’s examination (available in the Library or from Oxford Examination Papers Online [OxAM]: www.oxam.ox.ac.uk).

Your supervisor and course lecturer will expect a piece of work which sets out an argument; engages in analysis; and draws a conclusion. The writing guidelines in this handbook (see WRITING) should be useful to follow in preparing for your first few essays. In Michaelmas term, your course convenors will tell you in advance what topic the essay question/s will be on and you should spend a few days reading up on it. The essay question/s will be released at 9am on each Friday submission day, and you will then have until 5pm on that day to write and submit your essay.

Your supervisor or course convenor will provide you with feedback via CANVAS ( ), usually within two weeks of the submission date, for discussion at your next meeting.

The first essay of Michaelmas Term, due in Week 2 and marked by your supervisor, will be on a subject discussed in the introductory module: Conceptualising and Historicising the Study of Forced Migration. All other essays will be assessed by the relevant course convenor, who will provide you with written feedback and an indicative mark (via CANVAS ( ))). You are encouraged to discuss this feedback with your supervisor.

Full-time MSc students should generally regard their studies as a full-time occupation of 40 hours per week during term time, and should normally be available for academic commitments during core working hours (i.e. 9 am to 5 pm on weekdays).

Students who feel they would benefit from further support and training for handling their study workloads can sign up for skills training (for further information see OPPORTUNITIES FOR SKILLS TRAINING and CANVAS (இ)).
STUDENT GRANTS

The Grants Committee is able to make small grants available to students on the MSc in Refugee and Forced Migration Studies, as detailed below.

Thesis Support Fund

This is designed to support students on the MSc in Refugee and Forced Migration Studies in the preparation of their theses. Students will be able to apply for funds up to £250 that are needed for activities relating directly to their thesis. While we generally discourage primary fieldwork (given the tight timetable of the course), this money may be used for travel and fees in respect of activities such as the following:

- Consulting archives or library collections outside Oxford.
- Meeting with academics or other experts in institutions outside Oxford.
- Participating in workshops or conferences relating to the theme of the thesis.
- Technical support in the preparation of the thesis.
- Primary research costs in exceptional cases

ODID Hardship Fund

As a last resort, the department has a hardship fund that is intended to award small grants to help students who have found themselves in unexpected financial difficulties. These grants are intended only for self-funded students. Please email the Course Coordinator for details.

CAREERS INFORMATION AND ADVICE

There is a Careers Orientations Session held in week 4 of Michaelmas (Monday 1 November, 1100-1200) via TEAMS, led by Damilola Odimayo from the University’s Careers Service.

The University's Careers Service is situated at 56 Banbury Road Oxford. The Careers Service exists to enable current and recent Oxford University students to make and implement well-informed decisions about their careers. The Careers Service holds a yearly information session at the Department of International Development, open to all students.

For advice and more information regarding internships, job opportunities please see the Oxford Student website (www.ox.ac.uk/students/life/experience) and the University Careers Service website (www.careers.ox.ac.uk).

Other careers events to look out for:

- International Organisations’ Day – London School of Economics – November
- International Careers Day – January
OXFORD MIGRATION STUDIES SOCIETY

The Oxford Migration Studies Society is a student-run University Society that aims to connect people in Oxford examining any facet of migration and cultural pluralism, and to build dialogue and relationships across disciplines, organising forums for socialising, resource and information sharing, and research support.

Society members have included students and researchers from the Refugee Studies Centre (RSC), international development, politics, history, geography, and sociology. The society’s projects have included regular social events, research presentation seminars, publications, and special events such as speakers, field trips, workshops, and inter-university conferences and exchanges.

MIGRATION AND MOBILITY NETWORK

Researchers of migration and mobility across the University have the possibility to join a new network: (http://torch.ox.ac.uk/migration-and-mobility#quicktabs-theme_term_quicktab=0) which reaches across the University’s migration research centres as well as beyond: it aims to be a platform for anyone working on themes relating to migration and mobility. We consider the Oxford Migration Studies Society OMSS as the 'student arm' of this network, and would be delighted to assist with any events if required, and advertise for them on the network website.

For regular network newsletters, as well as general enquiries, please email the network coordinator, Domiziana Turcatti (domiziana.turcatti@wolfson.ox.ac.uk), or the generic network email address (migration-mobility@torch.ox.ac.uk).

OXFORD MONITOR OF FORCED MIGRATION

The Oxford Monitor of Forced Migration (OxMo) is an independent, student-run publication that moves to engage with various aspects of forced migration through academic scholarship. At its core, OxMo is dedicated to protecting and advancing human rights of individuals who have been forcibly displaced. By monitoring political, legal and practical developments, we seek to draw attention to the plight of forced migrants, identify gaps within existing international and national protection regimes and engage with the many practical and conceptual concerns which perpetuate displacement. We seek to present critical yet balanced analyses of forced migration issues, placing particular emphasis on monitoring the policies and actions of governments, international organizations, and local and international NGOs. Equally, we are committed to giving expression to innovative undertakings that move to alleviate and counter the numerous difficulties that forced migrants face.

Aside from serving as an important academic forum, OxMo is unique in that we seek to establish a space for students to meaningfully take part in the ongoing discourse between scholarship and practice that underpins Forced Migration Studies. We believe that students remain a highly valuable yet under tapped resource in the effort to allay forced migration predicaments and advance human rights. Overall, OxMo aims to foster a truly global dialogue that moves beyond the “north/south” dichotomy by cultivating intellectual exchanges between equals.

More information is available from OxMo’s web site: https://oxfordmonitor.wixsite.com/website-1

SUPERVISION
SUPERVISION

You will have been assigned an individual supervisor, with whom you will have a short, introductory meeting in Induction Week. During this meeting you and your supervisor should discuss your needs, expectations and ways of working and what your responsibilities are. You might also want to discuss your thesis topic ideas and option course choices with them, as you will need to sign up to your Hilary term options by the end of week 1/early week 2.

After this initial meeting, you will be expected to meet regularly with your supervisor to discuss your progress, programme of study, research interests and formative essays. These meetings may be scheduled in advance for the whole term. The recommended supervision programme for Michaelmas is:

Week 0 – Short individual introductory session (20 minutes)
Week 2 – Individual meeting and essay writing discussion (30 minutes)
Week 4 – Group meeting to discuss essay feedback (1 hour)
Week 6 – Individual meeting and thesis discussion (30 minutes)
Week 8 – Draft Thesis Topic Approval Form and discussion (1 hour)

It is up to you and your supervisor to agree exactly when meet, but it is a good idea to get this into your diaries at the start of each term.

Your supervisor will help you to start thinking about your thesis from the start of the course, and will suggest preparatory readings to help you develop your thinking. Come prepared to discuss your ideas from the start, as your supervisor will help you to identify a suitable topic and questions. By the end of Michaelmas term, you have to submit a draft Thesis Topic Approval Form to your supervisor for feedback; and your supervisor must have approved this by the Tuesday of Week 3 in Hilary, when it is submitted to the Course Coordinator for approval by the Chair of the Examiners (see EXAM DEADLINES).

Your supervisor will have access via CANVAS to your essay feedback from your course lecturers. They may discuss with you any challenges you are facing in the writing of these essays, and suggest measures for improvement.

Although your supervisor will be in close and regular contact with you throughout the year, supervision should focus on your academic progress. If you have any queries about procedural or administrative matters to do with degree or exam administration, you should contact the Course Coordinator. Other personal, logistical, pastoral or financial matters should be directed to your College Advisor.

Supervisors are drawn from the teaching and research staff based at the Refugee Studies Centre, although on occasion we may appoint a supervisor from another department or centre if this would be more appropriate for your thesis subject.

Reporting Supervision Issues

If you have any issues with your supervision, please raise these as soon as possible so that they can be addressed promptly. It is very important for a student to be able to work well with their supervisor, so any problems raised will be taken seriously and considered carefully. Reports should be made to the Course Director, via email. All such reports will be treated in the strictest confidence and handled tactfully. (See also SUPERVISION OF THESIS for more information)
GUIDANCE FOR STUDENTS AND SUPERVISORS
(Adapted from regulations originally issued by the Education Committee)

RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE STUDENT

1. The student must accept his or her obligation to act as a responsible member of the University’s academic community.

2. The student should take ultimate responsibility for his or her work programme and endeavour to develop an appropriate working pattern, including an agreed and professional relationship with the supervisor(s). The student should discuss with the supervisor the type of guidance and comment which he or she finds most helpful, and agree a schedule of meetings.

3. He or she should make appropriate use of the teaching and learning facilities available within the University.

4. It is the student’s responsibility to seek out and follow the regulations relevant to his or her course, including faculty/departmental handbooks/notes of guidance, and seek clarification from supervisors and elsewhere if this is necessary.

5. The student should not hesitate to take the initiative in raising problems or difficulties, however elementary they may seem. He or she should ensure that any problems regarding the course are drawn to the attention of the supervisor so that appropriate guidance may be offered.

6. The student should seek to maintain progress in accordance with the plan of work agreed with the supervisor, including in particular the presentation of the required written material in sufficient time for comment and discussion. Both the student and supervisor may want to keep a record of all formal, scheduled meetings. They may also want to agree a record of what has been discussed and decided.

7. The student should recognise that a supervisor will have many competing demands on his or her time. The student should hand in work in good time to the supervisor and give adequate notice of unscheduled meetings. The need for adequate notice also applies to requests for references from the supervisor.

8. The student should be aware that the provision of constructive criticism is central to a satisfactory supervisory relationship, and should always seek a full assessment of the strengths and weaknesses of his or her work.

9. If the student feels that there are good grounds for contemplating a change of supervision arrangements, this should first be discussed with the supervisor or, if this seems difficult, with the Course Director.

10. Where problems arise, it is essential that a student gives full weight to any guidance and corrective action proposed by the supervisor.

11. The student should ensure that the standard of his or her English is sufficient for the completion of written assignments, the end of year examinations and the presentation of essays. Students whose first language is not English should take advice on this.

12. The student should make full use of the facilities for career guidance and development, and should consult their supervisor for advice and encouragement where appropriate.

13. The student should ensure that he or she allows adequate time for writing up the Thesis, taking the advice of the supervisor. Particular attention should be paid to final proof-reading [see PROOF READING for further information].
RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE SUPERVISOR

1. In considering an invitation to supervise an MSc student, the supervisor must recognise and accept the responsibilities both to the student and to the Graduate Studies Committee for the Department of International Development (ODID) implicit in the supervisory relationship.

2. The supervisor is required to have a meeting with the new student not later than the first week of full term.

3. The supervisor is responsible for giving advice about the nature of the course and the standard expected. The supervisor can also help advise the student about literature and sources, attendance at classes, and requisite techniques (including helping to arrange instruction where necessary).

4. The supervisor should ensure that the student works within a planned framework which marks out the stages which the student should be expected to have completed at various points in his or her period of study. This is particularly important for meeting various deadlines related to the supervision and preparation of the student’s thesis.

5. The supervisor should meet with the student regularly. Times should be fixed early in each term so as to ensure that a busy supervisor does not inadvertently find that meetings are less frequent than the student would like, and to give sufficient time for the student to discuss the work and for the supervisor to check that certain things have been done. Informal day-to-day contact should not be seen as a substitute for formal scheduled meetings. The supervisor should also be accessible to the student at other appropriate times when advice is needed. The supervisor should also request written work as appropriate. Such work should be returned with constructive criticism and in reasonable time.

6. The supervisor should tell the student from time to time how well, in the supervisor’s opinion, work is progressing, and try to ensure that the student feels properly directed and able to communicate with the supervisor. It is essential that when problems arise, corrective action is clearly identified and full guidance and assistance are given to the student.

7. The supervisor is required to report in writing to the Graduate Studies Committee for the Department of International Development (ODID) on the student’s work three times a year, once at the end of each term. Each report should state the nature and extent of recent contact with the student, and, if there has been none, state why this is so. The report should also make clear whether the student is making satisfactory progress and, in this regard, the supervisor should bear in mind comments made by essay markers and special supervisors.

8. The supervisor should not be absent on leave (during term-time) unless appropriate temporary supervision has been arranged for the student.
FEEDBACK ON LEARNING AND ASSESSMENT

Feedback on both formative and summative assessment is an important element of all programmes at Oxford and may be provided informally and/or formally.

Feedback on formative assessment and other informal feedback

Feedback on formative assessment e.g. course essays or assignments, should:

- Provide guidance to those for whom extended pieces of writing are unfamiliar forms of assessment.
- Indicate areas of strength and weakness in relation to the assessment task.
- Provide students with an indication of the expectations and standards towards which they are working.

Students can expect to receive feedback on their progress and on their formatively assessed work submitted during Michaelmas and Hilary. This will take the form of:

- Informal feedback provided during classes/tutorials and other interactions with teaching staff.
- Your essays returned to you within two weeks of the submission, and written feedback via CANVAS giving you overall comments on your work and an indicative mark. In addition, the lecturer may have annotated your essay, highlighting individual points of strength and weakness in your argument.
- Your supervisor will be able to view your essays and feedback via the Grades tool on CANVAS, so you should expect to discuss these during your regular supervisions.

Feedback on summative assessment

Summative assessment contributes to your degree result and is used to evaluate formally the extent to which you have succeeded in meeting the published assessment criteria for your programme of study.

The purpose of feedback on summative assessment e.g. theses, is to provide a critical review of the work and suggestions for improvements and future development of the research topic to enable students to develop their work for doctoral study, if appropriate.

Feedback on theses

Under the direction of the Chair of Examiners, we provide written feedback to all students on their theses. The principal component of these are the assessors’ reports as added to (and edited, if required) by the Chair of Examiners. The Chair ensures that the feedback is consistent with the final agreed mark in cases where, for example, examiners have over-ridden the assessors’ mark, or where assessors disagreed, and appropriate synthesis of the feedback is provided. Students will receive one report only and we aim to distribute it within two weeks following the meeting of examiners at which the marks are ratified.

Under no circumstances should any academic staff be contacted with regard to formal extension requests for assessed elements as this could undermine the impartial assessment process. Requests MUST go through your college tutor.

Other information about assessment standards

Students are advised to read the internal and external examiners’ reports for the last cohort (published on CANVAS under ‘Summative Assignments and Exam Resources’ in mid-Michaelmas) which can provide valuable insights and contribute to students’ preparations for examinations and other forms of assessment.
GRADUATE SUPERVISION REPORTING (GSR)

At the end of each term, your supervisor will submit a report on your academic progress. To facilitate this reporting, the University operates an online Graduate Supervision Reporting (GSR) system. You have the opportunity to contribute to your termly supervision reports, via Student Self Service (link below), by reviewing and commenting on your own progress.

You are strongly encouraged to take the opportunity to review and comment on your academic progress, any skills training you have undertaken or may need to in the future, and on your engagement with the academic community (e.g. seminar/conference attendance).

Your supervisor will review and comment on your academic progress and performance during the current term and assess skills and training needs to be addressed during the next term. Your supervisor should discuss the report with you, as it will form the basis for feedback on your progress, for identifying areas where further work is required, for reviewing your progress against an agreed timetable, and for agreeing plans for the term ahead.

When reporting on academic progress, students on taught courses should review progress during the current term, and measure this progress against the timetable and requirements for their programme of study. All students should briefly describe which subject-specific research skills and more general personal/professional skills they have acquired or developed during the current term. You should include attendance at relevant classes that form part of your programme of study and also include courses, seminars or workshops offered or arranged by your department or the division. Students should also reflect on the skills required to undertake the work they intend to carry out. You should mention any skills you do not already have or you may wish to strengthen through undertaking training.

If you have any complaints about the supervision you are receiving, you should raise this with your Course Director or the ODID Director of Graduate Studies. You should not use the supervision reporting system as a mechanism for complaints.

Students are asked to report in Week 7 of term via the Student Self Service portal, using their Oxford SSO sign in details. Once you have completed your sections of the online form, it will be released to your supervisor for completion and will also be visible to your course director, director of graduate studies and to your college advisor. When the supervisor’s sections are completed, you will be able to view the report, as will the relevant course director, director of graduate studies and your college advisor. Directors of graduate studies are responsible for ensuring that appropriate supervision takes place, and this is one of the mechanisms they use to obtain information about supervision. College advisors are a source of support and advice to students, and it is therefore important that they are informed of your progress, including concerns (expressed by you and/or your supervisor).

To access the reporting system, go to https://www.ox.ac.uk/students/selfservice?wssl=1. You will be able to log on to the site using your single sign-on details. However, should you need additional support, please contact the Course Coordinator in the first instance.

WRITING AND REFERENCES
WRITING ESSAYS AND PREPARING PAPERS FOR CLASS WORK

Introduction

These notes are guidelines on preparing the essays which you are asked to give in the course of reading for the degree. They are plainly stated, so as to render them easy to follow. But they are not meant as dogmatic instructions to be followed unquestioningly. There is no such thing as the perfect essay. What follows are suggestions on how to write a good essay.

At the basis of an essay question, there usually is a problem. The problem may not have any solution, and the task may consist of explaining the nature of the problem or perhaps presenting several imperfect solutions with their criticisms. But essay writing is really about understanding problems.

When you write an essay, you are an author. Essay writing is an exercise in thinking. Always state what you think and back it up with good arguments. Do not just set out an assortment of the paraphrased opinions of the cognoscenti, without comment, acknowledgement or criticism.

Step One: Decide what the problem is all about

Underline the key words in the essay question and set out the relationship between them. Ask yourself simple questions such as: ‘What is ....?’, ‘Why is ....?’, ‘How does .....?’, or even ‘Is/are .....?’

For example, if you were writing an essay entitled:

Compare and contrast legal pluralism and legal culture as ways of studying migrants’ relationship with the law

You might underline legal pluralism, legal culture, relationship with the law, and especially ways of studying, and then ask yourself: ‘what is legal pluralism?’, ‘what is legal culture?’, ‘what is meant by relationship with the law?’.

Some further questions to ask yourself might be:

· Should I focus on laws in the destination country only?
· Should I focus more on migrants’ perceptions of laws, or their formal normative relationship to the law, or the relationship as actually experienced?

You should also ask yourself: ‘What is the point of the question?’ or ‘What is the question driving at?’.

It is important to note that in the question ‘legal pluralism’ and ‘legal culture’ are two perspectives rather than actual situations. The question is thus asking for a theoretical or methodological evaluation of the two approaches. If you elaborate how migration may affect the legal culture of the receiving society, then you are probably missing the point.

If you were unable to break down the question in this way, you would not be able to answer the question. It could be that you had not done the required reading or had not attended classes. There is no substitute for this. However, if you have read widely and attended classes and are still uncertain or confused about the terms being used, it is useful to consult the Encyclopaedia of the Social Sciences or even the Shorter Oxford English Dictionary.

Step Two: Find the missing link

Very often the relationship between the key words is not simple and direct. There may be unstated assumptions, other factors than the plain and obvious, theoretical dimensions and so on which also need to be taken into account.

To take an example, if the question being asked were:

How can we reconcile the idea that human and economic development tends to increase migration and mobility, with the fact that the proportion of international migrants has not increased significantly over the past century?
The missing links would be that:

- The last century experienced significant human and economic development; and
- There is a causal relation between development and migration (i.e., development causes migration).

Unpacking this second assumption could be a way to address the question.

Step Three: State your major points

When you have located the missing links you should be able to state the major points of your essay in the form of short, linked statements. This is an essential part of preparing your explanation. Very often students (and lecturers) find they can explain something better the second time around. It may be that they were not sure what the major points were, or how they were linked, the first time. Usually, it is because they were not rigorous enough about isolating the major points and indicating how they were linked. When you know what the major points are and thus what you want to leave out, you can begin to plan your essay.

In planning your essay, you will find that each of the major points you want to make will form the focus of a major section. Typically, each major section will consist of the statement of the major point (the principle at issue); evidence (examples, illustrations, analogies, diagrams); qualifications (elaborations and important exceptions); and, finally, a restatement of the major point.

Step Four: Structure each section

- Express the point at issue in a simple, direct statement. Keep technical terms to a minimum, though some will be unavoidable, and avoid complex grammatical structures. Useful introductions to your major sections could be: ‘Now the next point is ...’, ‘A second feature is ...’. These serve as markers between sections and draw attention to the major points.

- Choose one or two apt examples or illustrations. They should be short and appropriate. Little point is served by dredging up vast chunks from your sources, unless you wish to work out theoretical implications arising from the texts at length. If you are discussing the economic consequences of labour migration, do not digress into the ecological consequences of labour migration.

- Give any important qualifications. Again, it is more helpful to give ‘lead-ins’ such as ‘Of course there are exceptions ...’, ‘Now there are problems / difficulties ...’. In writing up your essay you will naturally wish to select more elegant phrases and ring the changes but these act as clarifiers. Remember to give only the main elaborations and leave out vague cases which are not essential.

- Restate your major point. At the end of each section you should restate the point at issue in a slightly extended form and in different words. The use of alternative words increases the chances of being understood and enhances your own understanding. Often a change of words, or word order, brings impact to your meaning and opens up entirely new perspectives.

Step Five: Summarise the main points you have made

At the end of the essay or paper you should summarise the major points you have made and give a conclusion. Sometimes, this will be your own answer to the question posed.

Summarising your main points brings together your argument and makes a conclusion possible. Useful introductions to your summary might be: ‘So, we can assert that...’, ‘Our conclusion must be...’, ‘It seems that...’. The summary might also contain any final thoughts: for example, if you found it hard to answer the question posed yourself or to come to a conclusion about the title set, you might want to indicate a few reasons why. Diagrams are sometimes useful in a summary.
Step Six: Plan your introduction

Planning introductions and conclusions is what most students find hardest. In the case of the conclusion, it is most frequently difficult because the student is not sure of their stance on a topic or problem. In the case of the introduction, it usually is because they cannot make up their minds about what they want to say. Accordingly, it is easier to plan the start of the essay or paper after you have planned the major sections and their summary. The reason is that you need to know what your explanation will consist of before you can draw the attention of your readers or audience to what you are going to explain and the way you are going to tackle it. If you don’t know what your major sections will be, clearly you cannot do this.

The main functions of an introduction are to indicate the essential features of the essay or paper and generate interest in what is being explained. The introduction is also a good place for specifying basic assumptions and indicating any theoretical slants which you wish to take up later. All of this will be important to gain and hold the attention of your reader or audience. Clear structure generates interest, understanding and favourable attitudes to the topic.
In most cases, the introduction will also contain a short essay plan.

Step Seven: Write your completed essay plan

Select a single large sheet of paper. Leave enough space for any extra thoughts which may occur to you as you write out the plan. Ideally, with good planning there ought not to be any, but there are always some. Your essay plan should look something like this:

Introduction
Section One: major point, example, qualification, restatement
Section Two: major point, example, qualification, restatement
Section N: major point, example, qualification, restatement
Summary / conclusion

Step Eight: Write down your essay

When you write down your essay, remember the virtues of the paragraph. Each paragraph should contain a point; new points should go into new paragraphs, unless they are simple one-liners (in which case, should they be in that particular place? Should they be in the essay at all?).

Not all major sections need the whole gamut of examples, qualifications and restatements, but never forget that what is straightforward and obvious to you when you write the essay may not be obvious to your reader.

If you need to put in a quotation, of course you will need to check the exact version. Get into the habit now of making quotations traceable to yourself and your reader. It must always be possible to trace the sources of your quotations. Some students keep apt quotations on index cards for ready reference. In any event, the requirement of proper referencing is not limited to direct quotations. You should always acknowledge ideas and opinions which are not your own and which are not sufficiently generalised to be mere commonplaces. Proper referencing enables your readers to give credit where it is due and not dismiss your brilliant, original perspectives as simple plagiarism. It will also help you when it comes to revisions.

Offer a full bibliography (or list of references), with every reference consisting of name of the author, date, full title, place of publication, and publisher. Only when you quote from readings contained in your course syllabus, it may sometimes not be necessary to give full bibliographical references. In such cases, a referral to the syllabus may be sufficient.
Useful Sources

On writing a master’s thesis:

General Reference Books

Encyclopaedia of Social Sciences - for technical words or words in common use which have specific disciplinary meanings.

Shorter Oxford English Dictionary - which despite its name is very long and gives detailed meanings, as well as similar and opposites like Roget.

(Adapted from Department of Anthropology and Sociology handout, SOAS, 1996)

OPPORTUNITIES FOR SKILLS TRAINING AND DEVELOPMENT

A wide range of information and training courses and materials are available to help you develop your academic skills, including English for Academic Studies courses. [see CANVAS () for further details]
THE THESIS

Your thesis should be between 10,000 and 15,000 words including footnotes, but excluding bibliography, appendices, list of abbreviations, short abstract and table of contents. Students awarded a Distinction (or sometimes a high merit) on the thesis may be invited to submit it to the Bodleian Library. They may also be invited to edit their work for submission for publication in the RSC Working Paper series.

FIELDWORK

We do not encourage original, field-based research on the degree, given the time constraints that students are subject to. A thesis can often be just as – or more – effective when it is based on secondary sources. The most important element of a thesis is formulating a suitable question – and usually this question is far more effectively answered by drawing on existing research or theory. Primary research in the form of, for example, online or telephone-based or web-based interviews or other research, remains possible however. If you plan on undertaking (telephone) interviews, you should refer to the discussions in your Research Methods classes regarding ethical research and ensure that you have completed the necessary forms for the department in good time (e.g. CUREC and/or any Risk Assessment and Travel forms). Any planned primary research will have to go through the ethics procedures outlined below before it is undertaken. Forms and guidance notes are available under ‘International Development/Research Ethics Information’ on CANVAS. Your supervisor will need to read and sign off your application, which should then be submitted to the Departmental Research Ethics Committee (DREC) at ODID for approval.

Contact the Course Convenor for further information about fieldwork-related travel and safety, including in relation to risk assessment and travel insurance.

Approval can take up to 4 weeks to come through, so please make sure you apply BY THE END OF WEEK 6 IN MICHAELMAS TERM at the latest for any projects planned for Hilary Term, or by WEEK 6 IN HILARY TERM for any work planned in the Easter Vacation or Trinity Term.

NB: Please note that any late forms received after week 8 will not be considered until next term.

ETHICAL REVIEW PROCEDURES FOR RESEARCH IN THE SOCIAL SCIENCES

All University of Oxford research projects involving human participants or personal data, conducted by Oxford students or staff (including academic and research staff) require research ethics scrutiny and approval before the research starts.

Why is ethics scrutiny and approval important?

- It is part of the responsible conduct of research;
- It demonstrates that your research has been conducted according to the highest ethical standards;
- It is important to protect the dignity, rights and welfare of all those involved in the research (whether they are participants, researchers or third parties);
- It is a University requirement;
- It is now the expectation - and in some cases formal requirement - of funding bodies.
You need ethics approval if...

Your research requires human subjects to participate directly by, for example,

- answering questions about themselves or their opinions – whether as members of the public or in elite interviews;
- performing tasks, or being observed – such as completing an online survey, participating in an experiment in a computer lab, reading words aloud for linguistic analysis; OR
- your research involves data (collected by you or others) about identified or identifiable people.

What you need to do

Under the University’s policy, ethical approval must be obtained before a research project begins.

1. Complete a CUREC 1A checklist (available via CANVAS). If this shows a CUREC 2 form is required, complete this too (but please note that this is not advised as it can take up to 2 months to process).

2. Sign the form yourself and then obtain your supervisor’s signature.

3. Give your completed form to the Course Coordinator, for forwarding to the Departmental Research Ethics Committee (DREC). Please note that you should do this at least 30 days before you plan to start your research.

Details of the procedure and application forms can be found on the Central University Research Ethics Committee (CUREC) website:

Please note you must not undertake any interviews until you have received CUREC approval. Any late forms received after week 8 will not be considered until next term

THESIS SUPPORT FUND

A thesis support fund is available to support students in the preparation of their theses (see STUDENT GRANTS for further information.)

HILARY

| Week 3 | Final Thesis Topic Approval Form (signed off by your supervisor) must be submitted to the Course Coordinator, for approval by the Chair of Examiners by 12 noon on Tuesday (30 January 2024). After Week 3 in Hilary term, ALL substantive changes of topic (i.e. those which affect the analytical or descriptive terrain of your thesis, and not simply minor changes to the title) MUST be formally approved by the Chair of Examiners. Please discuss this with your thesis supervisor if in doubt as to the extent of any proposed changes. Your supervisor should, in any case, approve ALL topic changes. Should you wish to make a substantive change to your topic, you will need to complete a Thesis Topic Change Form (on CANVAS). |
| Weeks 1-8 | Start more detailed work on literature review and framing your thesis; regular meetings with your supervisor |
| Friday of Week 6 | Deadline to submit CUREC for any research due to be carried out in Easter vacation |
| Vacation | Continue working on your thesis literature review and undertake any primary research, where relevant. |

TRINITY

| Week 3 | RECOMMENDED DEADLINE ONLY: by 12 noon on Friday (10 May 2024): Draft of one full chapter of thesis to be submitted to supervisor for comment |
| Week 3 or 4 | [Exact time and date TBC]: The thesis workshops are an opportunity to present your work in progress to a small group of your peers and a member of RSC staff, who will provide feedback on the subject matter, structure and general comments on your work. |
| Week 5 | RECOMMENDED DEADLINE ONLY: by 12 noon on Friday (24 May 2024): Full draft of thesis to be submitted to supervisor for comment. Only your supervisor should be asked to read a draft of your thesis. You may consult other members of staff for a discussion on a specific aspect of your work, but only with your supervisor’s approval. This will ensure that the RSC is fair to all students and will prevent assessors from reading your work in advance. |
| Week 8 | Final submission of thesis to Examination Schools by 12 noon BST on Thursday (14 June 2024). |
SUPERVISION OF THE THESIS

Changes of supervisor

Your supervisor will have been allocated, as far as is possible, based on your research interests. In Michaelmas and Hilary terms your supervisor provides general support for settling in, managing expectations, marking and reviewing formative essays and essay feedback, as well as discussing thesis topics and ideas. Students may, in some cases, change supervisor at the start of Hilary Term based on the topic of their thesis. The final decision about any new supervisor will be taken by the Course Director in conjunction with relevant academic staff. You should not approach staff members yourself. Staff have limited availability for supervision, so please do not be disappointed if your preferred thesis supervisor is unavailable.

Supervision and reading drafts

ONLY your supervisor should be asked to read a draft of part or all of your thesis. You may consult other members of staff for a discussion on a specific aspect of your work, but make sure you discuss this with your supervisor in advance. This is to ensure we are fair to all students and will prevent the markers from reading your work in advance.

In order to ensure equity, the standard entitlement for every student is to have one chapter and one full draft read by your supervisor. Your supervisor may agree to re-read some sections, but their ability to offer this will be at their discretion and based on their availability.

Thesis Supervision formerly ends in week 8 of Trinity Term, but in the case of students who have been granted an extension, some additional supervision time may be possible on a case by case basis where supervision meetings have been missed during term time.

Supervision varies from supervisor to supervisor. It will also be affected by your own working pattern and the nature of your research topic. Sometimes relatively frequent, short discussions can work well. At other times, longer, structured discussion or written comments may be more effective. It is up to you and your supervisor to establish how you will best work together. We would strongly recommend that during your first meeting, you agree on a timetable of meetings and what work you will submit before each meeting. We would expect you to meet your supervisor regularly throughout the year (roughly once a fortnight in term; you should not expect your supervisor to be available in vacations).

PROOF READING/COPY EDITING

Students have authorial responsibility for the written work they produce. Proof-reading represents the final stage of producing a piece of academic writing. Students are strongly encouraged to proof-read their own work, as this is an essential skill in the academic writing process. However, for longer pieces of work it is considered acceptable for students to seek the help of a third party for proof-reading. Such third parties can be professional proof-readers, fellow students, friends or family members. This policy does not apply to the supervisory relationship, nor in the case where proof-reading assistance is approved as a reasonable adjustment for disability.

The default position is that the guidance outlined below applies to all assessed written work where the word limit is 10,000 words or greater. However, departments and faculties may opt to specify that, for certain assessments, students should not be allowed any proof-reading assistance, if the purpose of the assessment is to determine students’ abilities in linguistic areas such as grammar or syntax. In this case, the rubric for the assessment should state clearly that no proof-reading assistance is permitted.

The use of third party proof-readers is not permitted for work where the word limit is fewer than 10,000 words.
What a proof-reader may and may not do

Within the context of students’ written work, to proof-read is to check for, identify and suggest corrections for errors in text. In no cases should a proof-reader make material changes to a student’s writing (that is, check or amend ideas, arguments or structure), since to do so is to compromise the authorship of the work.

A proof-reader may

✓ Identify typographical, spelling and punctuation errors;
✓ Identify formatting and layout errors and inconsistencies (e.g. page numbers, font size, line spacing, headers and footers);
✓ Identify grammatical and syntactical errors and anomalies or ambiguities in phrasing;
✓ Identify minor formatting errors in referencing (for consistency and order);
✓ Identify errors in the labelling of diagrams, charts or figures;
✓ Identify lexical repetition or omissions.

A proof-reader may not

• Add to content in any way;
• Check or correct facts, data calculations, formulae or equations;
• Rewrite content where meaning is ambiguous;
• Alter argument or logic where faulty;
• Re-arrange or re-order paragraphs to enhance structure or argument;
• Implement or significantly alter a referencing system;
• Re-label diagrams, charts or figures;
• Reduce content so as to comply with a specified word limit;
• Translate any part of the work into English.

AUTHORIAL RESPONSIBILITY

Students have overall authorial responsibility for their work and should choose whether they wish to accept the proof-reader’s advice. A third party proof-reader should mark up the student’s work with suggested changes which the student may then choose to accept or reject.

Failure to adhere to these guidelines could constitute a breach of academic integrity and contravene the Proctors’ Disciplinary Regulations for Candidates in Examination (http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/288-072.shtml).

It is therefore the student’s responsibility to provide the proof-reader with a copy of this policy statement.

With reference to this, we would draw your attention to points 3-6:

3. No candidate shall cheat or act dishonestly, or attempt to do so, in any way, whether before, during or after an examination, so as to obtain or seek to obtain an unfair advantage in an examination.
4. No candidate shall plagiarise by presenting someone else’s work as their own, or by incorporating other people’s work or ideas into their own work without full acknowledgement. This includes: verbatim quotation, cutting and pasting from the internet, and paraphrasing without clear acknowledgement; collusion; inaccurate citation; failure to acknowledge assistance; use of material written by professional agencies or other persons; and autoplagiarism.
5. Unless specifically permitted by the Special Subject Regulations for the examination concerned, no candidate shall submit to the examiners any work which he or she has previously submitted partially or in full for examination at this University or elsewhere. Where earlier work by the candidate is citable, he or she shall reference it clearly.

6. No person shall dishonestly give help to a candidate before, during or after an examination so as to give, or attempt to give, that candidate an unfair advantage in an examination.

Please see CITATION AND PLAGIARISM for details on good practice in citation and avoiding plagiarism.

CHANGES OF THESIS TOPIC

After Week 3 in Hilary Term, ALL substantive changes of topic (i.e. those which affect the content of your thesis, and not simply minor changes to the title) MUST be formally approved by the Chair of Examiners. Please discuss this with your supervisor if in doubt as to the extent of any proposed changes. Your supervisor must, in any case, approve any changes to your thesis topic. Should you wish to change your topic substantively, you will need to submit a Thesis Topic Change Form to the Chair for approval (on CANVAS).

HOW TO FIND PAST THESES IN THE SSL

To find copies of previous theses by students on the MSc in Refugee and Forced Migration Studies, go to the Bodleian Library main catalogue (http://solo.bodleian.ox.ac.uk). Under ‘Refine your search’, select ‘Theses’. If you search for the words ‘Refugee’ anywhere in the record, this will bring up a list of recent theses which received distinction and which are available to be consulted in the Social Sciences Library.
THESIS WRITING GUIDELINES

Students are required to write a multidisciplinary thesis, which will contribute to 45% of their overall mark for the course. Your thesis should be an original piece of work, but not necessarily a work of primary research. It must be a minimum of 10,000 and a maximum of 15,000 words, including the footnotes but not the bibliography. Examiners are not required to read beyond 15,000 words and over-length theses will incur a penalty (for details, please consult the examination conventions). Students awarded a distinction for their thesis are usually encouraged to publish it following the degree, often as an RSC Working Paper. A best thesis prize is awarded by the Examiners’ Committee to the value of £100.

Below is a guide to writing your thesis. Your supervisor will be your primary point of reference to discuss any questions you might have regarding your specific area of work. However, the general information below may prove helpful to you in preparing your work.

What the examiners are looking for

- A well-chosen topic with a clear question and aim, which is rooted in the relevant literature.
- Appropriateness of the structure (and methodology in exceptional cases, and only where relevant).
- A critical attitude to evidence, and, where relevant, an awareness of ethical research.
- Good knowledge of relevant theory and how it applies to your question. Critical engagement with literature, including an assessment of other texts rather than simple description of them.
- Clear and accurate referencing, spelling and grammar
- The most successful theses will contain ideas or insights which make an original contribution, rather than simply summarising established wisdom. This can be either a matter of saying original things about something quite familiar; or discussing unfamiliar material within the context of a familiar debate but offering new perspectives. The most successful theses also critically engage with existing literature, rather than simply reporting or summarising.

Choosing your topic

The thesis is an opportunity for you to harness your enthusiasm for a particular intellectual interest. You may know this topic before you arrive in Oxford; other students may find inspiration from classes taken or lectures heard in Michaelmas Term, from another student or a member of staff. Regardless of where the idea comes from, you should make sure that the decision is yours, that you are excited by the avenues the thesis could explore, confident that you can live with it for many months and that you can convince others of the value of research in the area. Choose a topic which will allow you to capitalise on your past experience and academic strengths. This passion will be evident in the thesis and the appropriateness of the topic will have a bearing on your final mark.

Discuss it with your supervisor

You should take the opportunity during your first meeting with your supervisor to discuss any thoughts for your thesis topic, even if they are embryonic. Your supervisor will be able to direct you to reading material which could assist you in your choice, as well as identify key researchers in the field working in the department. Take Michaelmas term to explore possibilities and ideas, as you may change your interest after exposure to the course syllabus.

Identify a question

Once you have decided an area of research, frame it as a question. This will help you to identify avenues of enquiry and to think about your hypothesis. It will direct your thinking towards analysis and away from description of the existing situation.
Further considerations
You should consider existing scholarship in the area. If little scholarship exists, it will be difficult to produce a thesis from secondary sources. Check that your sources are in a language that you can understand; where your sources are located and whether you will need to travel; and whether it will require quantitative analysis.

Conducting research

Identify a framework of literature and debates
The will help to situate your thesis in current research. It includes analysing existing research in the area (perhaps by producing a short literature review), identifying current debates, evaluating the strengths and weaknesses of major arguments and looking for gaps within the literature, where you might locate your own research. Your supervisor will be able to point you in the direction of current research in the area, but it will be up to you to appraise the arguments, scrutinise the gaps and examine ideas of direct relevance to your research. Identify the key concepts pertinent to your question and begin to scrutinise them in relation to your topic.

Evaluate your sources
Drawing on the subjects discussed in Research Methods, be prepared to question your sources. Don’t take it for granted that previous researchers have drawn the appropriate conclusions, or that a theory applies to all situations. Draw on your analysis of current debates in the field to really consider the validity of your sources. Refer to the raw sources used by other writers in the field. Ensure that your sources are not too dated.

Refine your question
Once you have undertaken preliminary research, refine your question. Discuss the scope of the question with your supervisor; your thesis will be weak if the research area is too broad or so thin that there is a dearth of sources. A clear and well-articulated question is absolutely crucial to good research.

Finally, be flexible. The literature you read during the course of your research may change the direction of your thoughts or your opinions.

Planning the thesis

Make a timetable
Draw up a timetable in which to write your thesis, in consultation with your supervisor. Arrange a date with your supervisor for him/her to read over one draft, allowing enough time for you subsequently to take on board arising suggestions. You will find that life in Hilary Term becomes particularly busy: even if a last-minute blitz has worked in the past, you might be disappointed with the results of it on a project of the scale of the thesis. You will also need to leave time to account for any computer hassles near the end. Always save your thesis to a USB stick/external hard-drive/email account as well as the hard drive of your computer, to circumvent the panic of computer crashes. Ensure that you have the document ready for the printer in time to get it to Examination Schools by the deadline.

You will be conducting some research during the writing process, as they are not always nicely delineated processes, so ensure that you leave enough time for this during the writing process.

Write a plan
Write a one-page document ‘What am I trying to say’ which will help you to collate and order your main arguments. This will help you to form a plan/structure for the work itself. You will probably find that you refine the plan as your ideas evolve, but make sure you still use a plan, as this will ensure your structure remains logical. Divide up your time according to the plan, ensuring you spend an appropriate amount of time proportionate to the length of text or importance of the point to the general argument. Diversions might be tantalisingly interesting, but you will find that 15,000 words is a limiting space in which to fit all your research.
Writing the thesis

Define your key concepts – and early on!
Don’t leave the definition of an important word/area in your question until the thirtieth page. Give due consideration to the definition of all your key concepts and theoretical aspects, ensuring that you evaluate their strengths and their relevance to your topic and your argument. Be sure to lay out your central research question, and justify its importance, right at the very start.

Convince your reader
Set out your argument early on in the thesis and bear in mind that your object is to persuade your reader of your hypothesis. Explain clearly at the start of the thesis why this topic is important and notable; in short, why your reader should care. Don’t leave the theory only to the introduction and conclusion but integrate it properly throughout.

Structure
The paragraph is the basic unit making up the thesis. Ensure that each paragraph has a point which is set out at the beginning, justified with evidence and related to the broader argument. Evidence, in the form of data or case studies, should be short and directly relevant. Don’t quote chunky passages of text, unless you’re analysing the theoretical implications of the text at length. Make sure you explain the significance of the example included. Each paragraph should build on to the argument of the previous one as the logical progression of your argument. You will have more material than space which will require you to carefully select and prioritise your material. Ask yourself how each example/point advances the argument as a litmus test for its inclusion in the thesis and to ensure that your message is clear. Be careful if your thesis is peppered with ‘however’ or ‘on the other hand’ as clarification or analysis of ideas is helpful, you need to ensure that your message is not confused or contradictory.

At the end of each section you should restate your major points in different words, relating them to the broader argument. This will help you to conclude the section and the thesis as a whole, as well as ensuring that the reader is entirely clear of the point you are making.

Familiarise yourself with academic work
Read articles in academic journals to gain stylistic hints. How do academics in the field construct their arguments and situate them within the existing scholarly debate? What techniques do they use to convince readers of the power of their own ideas? How do they use evidence without incorporating lengthy slabs of narrative?

Grammar, punctuation and spelling
You may use whichever convention is easiest for you (e.g. American English or UK spelling) as long as you are consistent. You are responsible for all aspects of the thesis and should allow enough time to edit the work carefully, including correction of spelling errors.

Referencing
The purpose of a bibliography is to allow readers to find the original book, article or source. You should adopt a clear and consistent system and take care to ensure the accuracy of each citation. Make sure that you only include sources to which you have referred in the thesis. (See CITATION AND PLAGIARISM)
THESIS AND RESEARCH DESIGN ESSAY FORMAT AND PRESENTATION

Format

- Must be presented in size 12 font (preferably Ariel or Calibri)
- Must be 1.5 line spaced
- Must be written in Word using a standard cover sheet template file so as to avoid any identifying meta data appearing on your work. The cover sheet should show your essay title, candidate number and word count on the front (You will find the templates on CANVAS)
- Must be anonymous, with only your candidate number on the front cover sheet
- NB: Do not include anything in your work that might identify you: this includes acknowledgments for help given, or references to your own previous work, such as a thesis or paper, which is unlikely to have been read by the rest of the class.
- Must have a bibliography that consists only of references that are cited in the text; the section title should be ‘References Cited’. All direct quotations must be fully referenced, with a page number.
- Must follow a recognized system of referencing that accurately and consistently applied throughout. Either author-date or footnote style is acceptable, but please consult with your supervisor and course director as some referencing styles are more or less appropriate for certain types of research. Most theses use an author-date system (see REFERENCING for the House Style Guide for Referencing and Bibliographies)
- Shouldn’t exceed the stipulated word limit (3,000 words for the Research Design Essay and 15,000 for the Thesis) and state the word count clearly on the front cover sheet
- NB: The word count should include your main text, in-text citations and any footnotes (which should be kept to a minimum); but exclude numerical data tables, and reference tools such as your bibliography (and any appendices, a list of abbreviations, short abstract and table of contents). Exceeding the given word count for submitted work may incur an academic penalty (please refer to the degree’s Exam Conventions for further details – they will be published on Canvas in Michaelmas Term)

SUBMISSION PROCEDURE

Where, when and how to submit:

You will need to submit electronically via Inspera:

- your Research Design Essay (by 12 noon GMT on Friday Week 7 Hilary, 1 March 2024)
- your thesis (by 12 noon BST on Thursday Week 8 Trinity, 13 June 2024)

Declaration of authorship

You will also be asked to complete an authorship declaration electronically via Inspera, and the word count will be checked. Penalties may be applied if you exceed the word limit.

Screening/retaining an electronic copy of your work (Guidance is available on CANVAS)

You will be required to use Inspera when you submit your work. Inspera will run it through Turnitín, a plagiarism detection service which screens students’ work and compares it with the Turnitin database. You will be asked to complete an authorship declaration that the electronic material you have screened is your own work. Checks will be made of such declarations and dishonesty will be treated as an attempt to cheat in the examination. You will be responsible for retaining an electronic copy of your submitted work until the examination is concluded.

COVER SHEET TEMPLATES AND GUIDANCE WILL BE AVAILABLE ON CANVAS
Clear referencing is important to enable the reader to trace any publication referred to in the text, including printed sources such as books, journal articles, conference proceedings, government publications or theses, and electronic or audio-visual sources such as URLs, podcasts, documentaries, e-journals, archived discussion list messages or references from a CD-ROM database.

We recommend the Chicago Manual of Style system for referencing. You can find a simple guidance on the style here https://www.chicagomanualofstyle.org/tools_citationguide.html.

For more complicated questions about referencing unusual documents or unpublished sources, consult the full manual, which is held in the Bodleian (The Chicago Manual of Style, 17th Edition. Chicago: University of Chicago Press).

The link above offers a quick guide to both the footnote system and the author-date system, however we have a preference for the author-date system, which is the norm for social sciences, and which also has the advantage of being succinct. Some theses make extensive use of archival or unpublished documents, and in those cases the footnote system may be preferable – although be aware that footnotes (like in-text citations) are included in your word count. The best approach is to consult your supervisor.

NB: We recommend the Chicago Manual of Style for referencing only. On questions of English spelling and usage, we would prefer students to follow English language and grammatical conventions.

EXAMINATION AND ASSESSMENT
NOTES ON THE EXAMINED ELEMENTS

The final mark for the degree is made up of a mean of five marks weighted as follows:

i) Examination Paper I (Legal and Normative Frameworks) 15%
ii) Examination Paper II (Political and Anthropological Frameworks) 15%
iii) Option Course Paper 1 (essay or exam) 10%
iv) Option Course Paper 2 (essay or exam) 10%
v) Submission (Qualitative Research Design Essay for Research Methods) 10%
vii) Submission (Thesis) 40%

Papers I and II will be in-person, digital, examinations, each of which requires 3 essays of around 1500 words to be written in 3 hours, usually in week 1 of Trinity Term. Any option course exams will be 2 hour, digital, and in-person, also in week 1 Trinity. The dates of these, however, will be confirmed at least 5 weeks beforehand. Any option course essays will be 3,000 words and due in at 12 noon on Friday of Week 0 of Trinity Term.

You will find a full description of the topics which are covered in the examination papers.

The Thesis is approximately 15,000 words, which accounts for 40% of your final mark, and must engage in the multi-disciplinary analysis of a single issue in forced migration. The word count should be not less than 10,000 words and not more than 15,000 words. See \textit{FORMAT AND PRESENTATION} for more details.

The topic of this essay must be submitted to your supervisor via the Thesis Topic Approval Form by the end of Michaelmas, and then the signed form must be submitted to the Course Coordinator by week 3 of Hilary for approval by the Chair of the Examiners. See \textit{EXAM DEADLINES} for specific dates.

The Qualitative Research Design Essay for Research Methods involves an assessed piece of research design in response to a written brief, which will be released in week 2 of Michaelmas Term. It can be up to 3,000 words.

EXAMINATION ORGANISATION

What follows is a summary of the most important facts that relate to the examinations process. Further information can be found in the Examination Regulations (on the University website), and the Education Committee’s notes of guidance on their website. Please also ensure that you read the Examination Conventions on CANVAS (☑️) for further details about the examination and marking process.

Conduct

The proper conduct of all examinations in the University comes under the jurisdiction of the Proctors (see below for further information).

Proctors’ Office  www.admin.ox.ac.uk/proctors

The fair and proper conduct of all examinations in the university comes under the jurisdiction of the Proctors. There are two Proctors who are University officers, elected annually from the academic staff, who ensure generally that the statutes, customs and privileges of the University are observed. When a complaint is received, the Proctors have the power to summon any member of the University to help them in their enquiries. A student is entitled to appear before the Proctors to put his/her case and may be accompanied by a friend or an adviser.

Complaints and academic appeals (see also ☑️ COMPLAINTS AND APPEALS)

http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/proctors/complaints.shtml

Entering for Examinations

You will receive and email invitation from Student Self Service to complete your examination entry by a given date. You must enter for your examinations by the end of Week 8 of Michaelmas term. You can find out more about this process here: https://www.ox.ac.uk/students/academic/exams/examination-entry. For alternative arrangements or examination adjustments see: https://www.ox.ac.uk/students/academic/exams/examination-adjustments.

Pass mark

A pass mark must be achieved in all the examined elements of the degree. A candidate who fails an element of the examinations may, at the discretion of the Examiners, be permitted to retake, usually by next year’s set deadlines.

Submission of examined work

Where deadlines are imposed, it is essential that they are strictly complied with. Penalties can be imposed for non-observance. At their most severe, these can amount to students being deemed to have failed part of their course.

Extensions

In very exceptional circumstances, (usually because of illness) it may be possible to request a short extension of time to hand in examined work. Contact your College Tutor or Course Coordinator who will advise you on how best to submit this request to Student Administration for consideration. DO NOT APPLY DIRECTLY TO YOUR SUPERVISOR. If your request is accepted, it will be forwarded to the Chair of Examiners for the MSc in Refugee and Forced Migration Studies.

Please note that such extensions should be approved in advance, and must be requested through your College. Failure to hand in papers and deposit your work by the deadline and without prior approval may result in failure to complete the degree.

Preparing for Examinations

To help you prepare for your open book exams in the first week of Trinity, we will hold an informal Exam Briefing/feedback session at the end of Hilary. The formative essays written during the year follow the same format as the open book exams, and so constitute key practice for these. Further details of the workshop will be circulated during Hilary.
Importance of answering the question as set
You must answer questions in the exact form in which they have been set for all written work. This is particularly important in the online open book examinations which make up part of your final mark. The question is not a prompt. If you rephrase it, you will be at a serious disadvantage, since we are only able to assess your work under one of the questions as formulated. This does not mean that you cannot critically evaluate the under-lying implications and assumptions of the question – indeed, this is exactly what we are looking for!

Arrangement in Cases of Illness and Disability
Candidates requiring special arrangements for the examinations for reasons of illness or disability must make prior application through their respective colleges to the Proctors.

The Proctors’ rules concerning arrangements in cases of illness and disability are detailed in the University Student Handbook available online: https://www.ox.ac.uk/students/academic/student-handbook. Subject to the provisions given in these notes, a candidate who fails to appear at the time and place appointed for any part of his or her examination shall be deemed to have withdrawn from the examination.

Mitigating Circumstances
Information on what to do if you would like examiners to be aware of any mitigating circumstances that may have affected your performance before or during an examination (such as illness, accident or bereavement) are available on the Oxford Students website (https://www.ox.ac.uk/students/academic/student-handbook).
EXAMINATION REGULATIONS

The Examination Regulations (which you may also hear referred to as ‘the Grey Book’) contain most of the University's formal regulations relating to examinations and to the programmes of study offered by the University. They are available online at: http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/examregs/.

These contain most of the University's formal regulations relating to examinations and to the programmes of study offered by the University.

The following sections are of particular use:

Section 1: Regulations for the Conduct of University Examinations
https://examregs.admin.ox.ac.uk/Home/RegulationSearch

Section 8: Regulations for the Degree of Master of Science by Coursework, which is split into two subsections:

General regulations for all MSc by coursework degrees
https://examregs.admin.ox.ac.uk/Home/RegulationSearch

Special regulations specific to the MSc in Refugee and Forced Migration Studies:
https://examregs.admin.ox.ac.uk/Home/RegulationSearch

MSc in Refugee and Forced Migration Studies students may be provided with selected international legal materials for use during some examinations.

EXAMINATION CONVENTIONS

Examination conventions are the formal record of the specific assessment standards for the course to which they apply. They set out how your examined work will be marked and how the resulting marks will be used to arrive at a final result and classification of your award. They include information on: marking scales, marking and classification criteria, scaling of marks, progression, resits, penalties for late submission and under/over-length work.

The full examination conventions for the MSc in Refugee and Forced Migration Studies will be published on CANVAS in Michaelmas term.

PAST EXAM PAPERS

Past exam papers are available in the Library or at: www.oxam.ox.ac.uk.

PREVIOUS EXAMINERS’ REPORTS

Anonymised copies of Examiners’ reports from past years can be found on CANVAS. The reports for the previous year will be published in Michaelmas Term.
GOOD PRACTICE IN CITATION AND AVOIDING PLAGIARISM

Presenting work or ideas from another source as your own, with or without consent of the original author, by incorporating it into your work without full acknowledgement. All published and unpublished material, whether in manuscript, printed or electronic form, is covered under this definition, as is the use of material generated wholly or in part through use of artificial intelligence (save when use of AI for assessment has received prior authorisation e.g. as a reasonable adjustment for a student’s disability). Plagiarism can also include re-using your own work without citation. Under the regulations for examinations, intentional or reckless plagiarism is a disciplinary offence.

The necessity to acknowledge others’ work or ideas applies not only to text, but also to other media, such as computer code, illustrations, graphs etc. It applies equally to published text and data drawn from books and journals, and to unpublished text and data, whether from lectures, theses or other students’ essays. You must also attribute text, data, or other resources downloaded from websites.

Online avoiding plagiarism course/Use of Turnitin

By the end of Week 1 Michaelmas term, you will be required to show that you have read and understood the University’s guidelines on academic good practice, which are available at: http://www.ox.ac.uk/students/academic/guidance/skills/plagiarism

You will also have to take an online courses: Avoiding Plagiarism which is available at: https://CANVAS.ox.ac.uk/portal/hierarchy/skills/plag

Avoiding Plagiarism involves an online test. Once you have completed the test successfully, the system will automatically send an e-mail confirming your results to your University e-mail address. Please check carefully that this has not been sent to your junk mail box.

Please print out this confirmation of successfully completing the test and submit it to the Course Coordinator by 12 noon Friday Week 1 Michaelmas (13 October 2023).

You should also read, sign and date the Use of Turnitin declaration, which is included in your Induction Pack (and is also available on CANVAS), and submit this to the Course Coordinator by the same date.

University of Oxford Education Committee (EC) notes of guidance on avoiding plagiarism

Below are the Education Committee’s short notes:

What is plagiarism?

Plagiarism is the copying or paraphrasing of other people’s work or ideas into your own work without full acknowledgement. All published and unpublished material, whether in manuscript, printed or electronic form, is covered under this definition.

Collusion is another form of plagiarism involving the unauthorised collaboration of students (or others) in a piece of work.

Cases of suspected plagiarism in assessed work are investigated under the disciplinary regulations concerning conduct in examinations. Intentional or reckless plagiarism may incur severe penalties, including failure of your degree or expulsion from the university.

Why does plagiarism matter?

It would be wrong to describe plagiarism as only a minor form of cheating, or as merely a matter of academic etiquette. On the contrary, it is important to understand that plagiarism is a breach of academic integrity. It is a principle of intellectual honesty that all members of the academic community should acknowledge their debt to the originators of the ideas, words, and data which form the basis for their own work. Passing off another’s work as your own is not only poor scholarship, but also means that you have failed to complete the learning process. Deliberate plagiarism is unethical and can have serious consequences for your future career; it also undermines the standards of your institution and of the degrees it issues.
What forms can plagiarism take?

- Verbatim quotation of other people’s intellectual work without clear acknowledgement. Quotations must always be identified as such by the use of either quotation marks or indentation, with adequate citation. It must always be apparent to the reader which parts are your own independent work and where you have drawn on someone else’s ideas and language.

- Paraphrasing the work of others by altering a few words and changing their order, or by closely following the structure of their argument, is plagiarism because you are deriving your words and ideas from their work without giving due acknowledgement. Even if you include a reference to the original author in your own text you are still creating a misleading impression that the paraphrased wording is entirely your own. It is better to write a brief summary of the author’s overall argument in your own words than to paraphrase particular sections of his or her writing. This will ensure you have a genuine grasp of the argument and will avoid the difficulty of paraphrasing without plagiarising. You must also properly attribute all material you derive from lectures.

- Cutting and pasting from the Internet. Information derived from the Internet must be adequately referenced and included in the bibliography. It is important to evaluate carefully all material found on the Internet, as it is less likely to have been through the same process of scholarly peer review as published sources.

- Collusion. This can involve unauthorised collaboration between students, failure to attribute assistance received, or failure to follow precise regulations on group work projects. It is your responsibility to ensure that you are entirely clear about the extent of collaboration permitted, and which parts of the work must be your own.

- Inaccurate citation. It is important to cite correctly, according to the conventions of your discipline. Additionally, you should not include anything in a footnote or bibliography that you have not actually consulted. If you cannot gain access to a primary source you must make it clear in your citation that your knowledge of the work has been derived from a secondary text (e.g. Bradshaw, D. Title of Book, discussed in Wilson, E., Title of Book (London, 2004), p. 189).

- Failure to acknowledge. You must clearly acknowledge all assistance which has contributed to the production of your work, such as advice from fellow students, laboratory technicians, and other external sources. This need not apply to the assistance provided by your tutor or supervisor, nor to ordinary proofreading, but it is necessary to acknowledge other guidance which leads to substantive changes of content or approach.

- Professional agencies. You should neither make use of professional agencies in the production of your work nor submit material which has been written for you. It is vital to your intellectual training and development that you should undertake the research process unaided.

- Autoplagiarism. You must not submit work for assessment which you have already submitted (partially or in full) to fulfil the requirements of another degree course or examination.

Not just printed text!
The necessity to reference applies not only to text, but also to other media, such as computer code, illustrations, graphs etc. It applies equally to published text drawn from books and journals, and to unpublished text, whether from lecture handouts, theses or other students’ essays. You must also attribute text or other resources downloaded from web sites.

Please also refer to referencing for guidance on good referencing practice, and the house style for referencing and bibliographies.
AFTER THE EXAMINATIONS

Feedback on your thesis
Under the direction of the Chair of Examiners, written feedback is provided to all students on their theses. (See 📖 FEEDBACK for more information).

Receiving your results
You will receive an automatic e-mail once your examination results are available via your Student Self Service Academic and Assessment Results page. You will need to log in to Student Self Service using your Oxford Single Sign-on at: http://www.ox.ac.uk/students. Your Academic and Assessment Results page will detail all of your assessment results and your final classification. Results are generally available by the first half of July.

NB: You will not receive results for any of the assessment units which make up your final degree until the final results and degree classification is published in early July after the final exam board meeting.

Best thesis prize and Gil Loescher Prize for Best Overall Performance
The Examiners may, at their discretion, award a prize for the best thesis submitted by a student, and for the best overall performance by a student, taking into account performance in each of the individual examined elements. A prize of £100 will be sent to the winners during the summer.

Deposit of Theses receiving distinction in the Bodleian
The Examiners will normally recommend that theses awarded a distinction (or sometimes a high merit) should be deposited in the Bodleian Library. The Course Coordinator will write to you if this is the case, asking you to complete an Information for Thesis Cataloguing form (GSO.26b) and a Deposit and Consultation of Thesis form (GSO.3b).

Graduation from the MSc
Degrees are not automatically conferred at the end of the course, but at a degree ceremony (in person) or in absentia: http://www.ox.ac.uk/students/graduation/ceremonies/.

Degree ceremonies are arranged via your college, rather than by the Department. You should receive an invitation to a degree ceremony quite soon after arriving in Oxford (during Michaelmas term). Degree ceremonies will take place in late July and mid-September. You should check with your college to find out which ceremonies you are eligible for.

Publishing your work
Students who get a distinction for their MSc theses may be encouraged to edit their research for submission for simultaneous publication in the RSC Working Paper series, and a number of the Working Papers on these sites have originated in this way.

You are also very much encouraged to participate in public debates on forced migration and refugee-related issues, for instance by publishing in various forums, and we are proud to be associated with you. We suggest you identify yourself as follows: XX is/was an MSc student in Refugee and Forced Migration Studies, Oxford, 2023-24.

Progression from MSc to DPhil
On completion of the degree, you can apply to study for a DPhil at Oxford. This could be in International Development with ODID, or with another Department of the University (subject to their eligibility criteria). Admission to read for a DPhil at ODID is at the discretion of the Graduate Studies Committee, which will take into account:
1. the feasibility and coherence of your research proposal;
2. the availability of appropriate supervision; and
3. the marks you achieve in the MSc*.

If your application is successful, you will be admitted as a Probationary Research Student (PRS) leading to the DPhil programme. During the first academic year you will be required to do a number of tutorials on relevant topics with your supervisor(s); to undertake coursework for examination; and most importantly to submit a substantial piece of work outlining your proposed research. Your upgrading from PRS to the status of DPhil candidate is subject to an assessment of your written work.

You will receive more detailed guidelines about applying for admission to PRS and reading for a DPhil at Oxford during Michaelmas term.

* ODID normally requires an overall grade of 67% with a distinction (70% or above) on your thesis, although achieving these marks will not guarantee you a place on the DPhil.

COMPLAINTS AND ACADEMIC APPEALS

The University, the Social Sciences Division and the Oxford Department of International Development all hope that provision made for students at all stages of their programme of study will result in no need for complaints (about that provision) or appeals (against the outcomes of any form of assessment).

Where such a need arises, an informal discussion with the person immediately responsible for the issue that you wish to complain about (and who may not be one of the individuals identified below) is often the simplest way to achieve a satisfactory resolution.

Many sources of advice are available from colleges, faculties/departments and bodies like the Counselling Service or the OUSU Student Advice Service, which have extensive experience in advising students. You may wish to take advice from one of those sources before pursuing your complaint.

General areas of concern about provision affecting students as a whole should be raised through Student Consultative Committees or via student representation on the faculty/department’s committees.

Complaints
If your concern or complaint relates to teaching or other provision made by the faculty/department, then you should raise it with the Chair of the Teaching Committee (Course Director) or with the Director of Graduate Studies as appropriate. Complaints about departmental facilities should be made to the Departmental administrator (Graham Bray). If you feel unable to approach one of those individuals, you may contact the Head of Department/Faculty (Professor Diego Sánchez-Ancochea). The officer concerned will attempt to resolve your concern/complaint informally.

If you are dissatisfied with the outcome, you may take your concern further by making a formal complaint to the Proctors under the University Student Complaints Procedure (https://www.ox.ac.uk/students/academic/complaints).

If your concern or complaint relates to teaching or other provision made by your college, you should raise it either with your tutor or with one of the college officers, Senior Tutor, Tutor for Graduates (as appropriate). Your college will also be able to explain how to take your complaint further if you are dissatisfied with the outcome of its consideration.

Academic appeals
An academic appeal is an appeal against the decision of an academic body (e.g. boards of examiners, transfer and confirmation decisions etc.), on grounds such as procedural error or evidence of bias. There is no right of appeal against academic judgement.
If you have any concerns about your assessment process or outcome it is advisable to discuss these first informally with your subject or college tutor, Senior Tutor, course director, director of studies, supervisor or college or Head of Administration and Finance as appropriate. They will be able to explain the assessment process that was undertaken and may be able to address your concerns. Queries must not be raised directly with the examiners.

If you still have concerns you can make a formal appeal to the Proctors who will consider appeals under the University Academic Appeals Procedure (https://www.ox.ac.uk/students/academic/complaints).

Please remember in connection with all the academic appeals that:

- The Proctors are not empowered to challenge the academic judgement of examiners or academic bodies.
- The Proctors can consider whether the procedures for reaching an academic decision were properly followed; i.e. whether there was a significant procedural administrative error; whether there is evidence of bias or inadequate assessment; whether the examiners failed to take into account special factors affecting a candidate’s performance.
- On no account should you contact your examiners or assessors directly.

DEGREE ADMINISTRATION
UNIVERSITY REGULATIONS AND POLICIES

The university has a wide range of policies and regulations that apply to students. These are easily accessible through the A-Z of University regulations, codes of conduct and polices available on the Oxford Student website: https://www.ox.ac.uk/students/academic/regulations?wssl=1.

While every effort is made to ensure the accuracy of the information contained in this Handbook, it is for guidance only and does not constitute authoritative statements of University policy and practice in particular areas. For these, other documents should be consulted, including:

* Oxford University Statutes and Regulations
  www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/
* Education Committee Guidance Notes
  The Education Committee of the University is responsible for academic policy matters. Their website is: http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/epsc/

Residence requirements
MSc candidates are required to keep statutory residence and pursue their studies in Oxford for no less than three terms after admission. The Examination Regulations state that: ‘... student members who are reading any other degree of the University shall reside, for the period prescribed for that degree, within twenty-five miles from Carfax [centre of Oxford].’

Anyone wishing to live further than this will need to apply in writing to the Proctors who may authorise this in special circumstances. This means that students are required to reside in Oxford for at least weeks 1-8 for Michaelmas, Hilary and Trinity terms.

Overseas students: Tier 4 visa obligations
(See also https://www.ox.ac.uk/students/visa/during/legal?wssl=1)
If you are here on a Tier 4 student visa, you have the responsibility to ensure that you comply with the conditions of that visa. Not complying is a criminal offence and can lead to removal from the UK and refusal of future visas for a period of 1-10 years. Your responsibility includes making sure you do not stay beyond the expiry date as stated on your visa, unless you have made a renewal application. You must also adhere to the work conditions of your visa. Please make sure to co-operate with the University in fulfilling its Tier 4 duties so that it maintains its status as a Highly Trusted Sponsor enabling international students to study at Oxford.

Should you wish to stay in the UK to work when you have finished your studies you will need to apply for visa permission to do so. To find out more go to https://www.ox.ac.uk/students/visa/work?wssl=1.

Paid employment
The University recommends that full-time graduate students on a taught course (such as a Master’s) do not undertake more than 8 hours’ paid work each week whilst studying.

Students who wish to take up paid employment are required to seek advice from their supervisor in the first instance. Students must ensure that paid employment does not impair their studies. The MSc in Refugee and Forced Migration Studies is a serious and intense academic programme, and paid employment is advisable for students only under exceptional circumstances. If permission is granted, your supervisor will monitor on a termly basis that a proper balance is maintained between paid employment and academic coursework. Please note that University guidelines stipulate that masters courses are expected to entail full-time commitment. Please refer to the university’s guidelines at: https://www.ox.ac.uk/students/visa/during/work.

Internships/Pro Bono Work
Sometimes students on the course agree to undertake volunteer work with local refugee/migration organisations. While this is often helpful to the organisation and to the students concerned, it is important that such commitments are limited to a maximum of 2 hours a week to ensure that this participation does not interfere with their academic commitments.

University policies on conflict of interest / academic integrity in research
You will find details of these on CANVAS () under Study Guidance.
STUDENT CONSULTATION AND FEEDBACK

You are encouraged to make suggestions for change and improvements at any time to your teachers and supervisor.

Suggestions from students for high quality additions to the collection of readings in the library are especially welcomed.

Class representatives
During Induction Week we ask you to elect two or three class representatives from among your number. The representatives act as a channel for the class to convey their collective views to the Course Director.

Training for student representatives - Oxford University Student Union (OUSU) run training courses for class representatives, which we strongly encourage you to attend. The OUSU will get in touch with you early in Michaelmas, and you can contact them direct for further information via this link: https://www.oxfordsu.org/.

Social Secretary
We will also ask you to choose one of your elected class representatives to act as social secretary for your cohort. They will be responsible for organising social events and gatherings to help you get to know each other and bond as a group.

The names of these elected student representatives will be published on CANVAS by week 2.

Student Consultative Committee
One of the main forums for student feedback are the meetings of the Student Consultative Committee. These usually take place in Week 8 of each term. These meetings can be used to discuss students’ reactions to the course, as well as other related issues. The meeting is chaired by the Course Director, and notes are taken by the Course Coordinator (for consideration by the MSc in Refugee and Forced Migration Studies Teaching Committee). These meetings are usually attended by the student representatives, although any member of the class is welcome to attend. But, we ask that your representatives should solicit the views of the whole class before each meeting, and come prepared to speak to these during the meeting.

Departmental representation
Student representatives may be asked to attend a departmental meeting with the Head of Department, usually held twice a year. This is a forum for any department-specific feedback to be given, or for recent new developments to be announced by the HoD.

Division and University representation
Student representatives to sit on the Divisional Board are selected through a process organised by the Oxford University Student Union (OUSU). Details can be found on the OUSU website along with information about student representation at the university level.

University wide evaluation
Students on full-time courses are surveyed once per year on all aspects of their course (learning, living, pastoral support, college) through the Student Barometer. Previous results can be viewed by students, staff and the general public at: https://www.ox.ac.uk/students/life/student-engagement?wssl=1.

Individual student course evaluation
At the end of Michaelmas and Hilary terms, all students are asked to evaluate the courses they have studied. All answers are confidential and anonymous. Detailed entries will be kept on file and a summary of the views expressed will be discussed at MSc in Refugee and Forced Migration Studies Teaching Committee meetings.
SOURCES OF INFORMATION AND SUPPORT

Details of the wide range of sources of support available can be found on the Oxford Students website (www.ox.ac.uk/students/welfare), including in relation to mental and physical health and disability.

Within the Department

If you have any queries regarding procedural or administrative matters, or to do with the administration of the exams, please contact the Course Coordinator, Andrea Smith (andrea.smith@qeh.ox.ac.uk; tel: (2)81701).

Your first port of call for any academic matters should be your supervisor; (see SUPERVISION for further details about supervision.

However, the Course Director (Catherine Briddick) is also available to discuss any matters to do with the course with you: please e-mail her to arrange an appointment (catherine.briddick@qeh.ox.ac.uk).

If your issue is to do with teaching on the course, or with the course itself, and you need to speak to someone outside the course about this, you should contact the ODID Director of Graduate Studies (DGS): Professor Matthew Gibney (matthew.gibney@qeh.ox.ac.uk).

You can find more information and staff contact information via the ODID Departmental Website: http://www.qeh.ox.ac.uk/

Within your College

All students are assigned a College Adviser, who is usually a Fellow of the College.

Your College Adviser can:

- provide pastoral support, for example on health, personal or coping issues, and/or direct you to appropriate persons for assistance;
- monitor your progress, by discussing your University supervision reports and by being available for consultation, either in person or by email;
- discuss with you any problems or difficulties you may be experiencing in your Department or Faculty, and/or with your supervisor;
- consult the Tutor for Graduates/Senior Tutor if there are concerns about your academic progress and if you appear to be experiencing difficulties with your academic work;
- offer guidance on sources of support available within the College and University.

In addition your College Adviser may be able to offer you advice on academic-related matters such as: applications for research funding, conferences and seminar attendance, publication and career plans.\(^5\)

Your College Adviser is not expected to perform the role of your Department or Faculty Supervisor(s), and is not responsible for directing your academic work or for giving detailed academic guidance.

You will first meet your College Adviser during your first term, and you are encouraged to contact your College Adviser as and when you need advice or help. (You should also feel free to consult other College officers as necessary: see below.)

Your College Adviser may be changed during periods of sabbatical or other academic leave. Should there be reasons for you to seek a change of Adviser, you should contact your Tutor for Graduates/Senior Tutor.

Every college has its own systems of support for students, please refer to your college handbooks (which can be found on your college websites) for further information on who to contact and what support is available.

\(^5\)College Advisers would not normally be expected to provide academic references, as others are better placed to do so. They might provide a reference for other purposes, such as Junior Deanship, or a character reference.
Further information
This guidance focuses specifically on the role of your College Adviser. Your College Adviser will be able to direct you to relevant sources of advice and support, which you should feel free to consult as necessary. These might include (but are not limited to):

- College Chaplain or Welfare Fellow
- MCR President or MCR Welfare Officers
- College Nurse or GP
- College Counsellor
- College Tutor for Graduates/Senior Tutor or Academic Administrator
- College/Tutorial Office or equivalent
- College Bursary or equivalent
- Financial Aid/Student Hardship Officer

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

Can I change my course?
In theory, this is possible; but in practice, changing course can be difficult. Please speak to your Course Director for advice.

Who do I speak to if I’m taken seriously ill or need to leave Oxford unexpectedly?
Please familiarise yourself with what to do in cases of illness or medical emergency: you will find a link on the University’s Student Health site: http://www.ox.ac.uk/students/welfare/health.

In all cases, please let both your College Advisor and also, if possible, your Supervisor or the MSc RFMS Course Coordinator know what has happened.

What financial help is available should I have unexpected funding problems while on course?
Both your College and the Department may be able to help and advise you with financial problems. You should contact, in the first instance, your College Adviser (or the College Financial Aid/Student Hardship Officer, if your college has such a post). Within the Department, please contact the Graduate Studies Administrator, Dominique Attala (tel: (2)81806; dominique.attala@qeh.ox.ac.uk). Please note, however, that support may only be offered in cases of financial hardship and where your expected sources of funding have failed.

What do I do if I need to take a break from studying (suspend status)?
You may apply to the Graduate Studies Committee to suspend status for a specified period. If your application is approved, you will not be required to pay fees during the period of suspension and will resume your former status at the end of the period.

Suspension of status may be for between one and three terms. In exceptional cases, additional terms may be requested, but these need the additional approval of the University Education Committee as dispensation from the Examination Regulations is required. It can only be granted while a student still has status available to return to.

Suspension of status is normally granted where you are not able actively to study. This could be for various reasons, but the most common circumstances include health-related/personal grounds, domestic crisis or unforeseeable financial difficulty.

When a student suspends, the clock stops, and the student returns from suspension at the point when they departed. Normally students do not have access to University/College facilities (including libraries) whilst suspended as it is assumed they are not studying (though e-mail access may be retained, to allow you to keep in touch with your supervisor(s) etc).

Applications for suspension of status must be made to the Graduate Studies Committee (through the Graduate Studies Administrator) using the form GSO.17; should be for a specified period of time; and must have the support of the supervisor(s) and the college.

How do I make a complaint or appeal?
For information about this, please see COMPLAINTS AND APPEALS
SPECIAL NEEDS AND DISABILITIES

The Disability Advisory Service (DAS) can provide information, advice and guidance on the way in which a particular disability may impact on your student experience at the University and assist with organising disability-related study support. For more information visit: www.ox.ac.uk/students/shw/das/

The University's Disability Office website is at: https://academic.admin.ox.ac.uk/disability-advisory-service.

Department contacts
If you have any concerns or need advice you can refer to your supervisor, or the department’s Disability Lead and Disability Co-ordinator:

Disability Co-ordinator - Dominique Attala (Graduate Studies Manager)
Disability Lead – Peter Franklin Routh (Head of Administration and Finance)

RECORDING SEMINARS

Students who believe they have disability-related grounds for recording seminars should contact the Disability Advisory Service on disability@admin.ox.ac.uk.

COUNSELLING SERVICE

The Counselling Service is here to help you address personal or emotional problems that get in the way of having a good experience at Oxford and realising your full academic and personal potential. They offer a free and confidential service. For more information visit: www.ox.ac.uk/students/shw/counselling/

A range of services led by students are available to help provide support to other students, peer support, OUSU Student Advice Service and Nightline. For more information visit: www.ox.ac.uk/students/shw/peer/.

There are also over 40 titles of e-book available covering a variety of topics including academic life, identity, self-care, relationships, mental health, disability, overcoming traumatic events, how to deal with anxiety, time management, food disorders, bereavement, etc. Readers can access these even when the libraries are closed. A list containing all the titles available (including direct links to the ebooks) is available at: http://www.bodleian.ox.ac.uk/using/disability/resources/self-help-books and they are also available on SOLO.
EQUALITY AND DIVERSITY

The Equality and Diversity Unit promotes equality, values diversity and supports departments/faculties and colleges in maintaining a working, learning and social environment in which the rights and dignity of all members of the University community are respected. It aims to ensure that no student will be treated less favourably on the grounds of age, disability, gender, gender reassignment, marriage and civil partnership, pregnancy and maternity, race, religion and/or belief, and sexual orientation. For more information on the networks and activities the Unit supports, visit: https://edu.admin.ox.ac.uk/home. These include:

- LGBT Staff Network (staff and graduate students)
- Race Equality Network (staff and students)
- Oxford Women’s Network (staff and students)
- LGBT History Month
- Black History Month

The Equality and Diversity Unit supports a network of over 300 harassment advisors in departments/faculties and colleges and a central Harassment Advisory Service. For more information on the University’s Harassment and Bullying policy and the support available for students visit: https://edu.admin.ox.ac.uk/harassment-advice.
8. INFORMATION ABOUT OXFORD LIBRARIES AND THE RSC
The Bodleian Libraries form the integrated library service of the University of Oxford, offering over 13 million volumes, 26 site libraries, over 4,000 study places, 80,000 online journals, 1,700 research databases, document supply services, information skills training programmes and world-class staff expertise: www.bodleian.ox.ac.uk.

To search the collections, locate items, access online resources, reserve or renew books, and for the library’s instant chat service, please use SOLO (Search Oxford Libraries Online): solo.bodleian.ox.ac.uk/. For off-site access to online resources log-in to SOLO with your Single-Sign-On. An extensive range of guides to resources and services are available online, https://libguides.bodleian.ox.ac.uk and details of forthcoming training are available at: https://www.bodleian.ox.ac.uk/ask/workshops.

The Bodleian Social Science Library (SSL) is the main library for the University of Oxford Social Sciences Division and particularly supports the Departments of: Economics, International Development, Geography, Anthropology, Politics and International Relations, Sociology, and Social Policy and Intervention, and the Centres for: Criminology, Refugee Studies, Russian and East European Studies, and Socio-Legal Studies. Of particular interest is the unique grey literature collection on refugee studies and forced migration, now fully searchable via SOLO. The SSL is housed on the ground floor of the Manor Road Building, www.bodleian.ox.ac.uk/libraries/ssl and is open 7 days a week during term-time (9am to 10pm Mon – Fri, 10am – 6pm Sat, 11am - 7pm Sun). The Library offers a variety of study spaces including graduate study rooms, individual study carrels, and two group discussion rooms which are available for booking. For answers to FAQs (Which password do I use? How do I print, copy and scan? How do holds work? etc.), please see the Bodleian Libraries main website www.bodleian.ox.ac.uk.

To arrange a one-to-one research support appointment with the subject consultant please email sarah.rhodes@bodleian.ox.ac.uk. Support for graduates needing to create or use qualitative data is provided by John Southall, the Data Librarian, at the SSL (john.southall@bodleian.ox.ac.uk). For information about library services for readers with disabilities please contact the SSL Reader Services Librarian, craig.finlay@bodleian.ox.ac.uk. To request new library materials for purchase, email the details to Sarah Rhodes.

Reading Lists are available via Oxford Reading Lists Online (ORLO). This interface provides students with the availability of print materials within the libraries as well as direct links to e-books, e-journals and scanned chapters which can also be accessed when off campus. Reading lists can found via the ORLO link on the front page of SOLO or directly via https://orlo.rl.talis.com/index.html. Students can also link through to their lists via the departmental CANVAS link: https://canvas.ox.ac.uk/.

In addition to the SSL, there are separate libraries for Business, Education and Law. Area studies are well served by the Vere Harmsworth Library, the Weston Library (for Africa and Commonwealth, and South Asia materials), the Nizami Ganjavi Library, the Latin American Centre Library, the Bodleian Japanese Library, and the KB Chen China Centre Library.

Oxford College Libraries generally offer collections and services to their own members. Nuffield College also offers reference access to its library to all postgraduate members of the University.

Box of Broadcasts is an on-demand TV and radio service for education. Members of the University of Oxford can search an archive of over 2 million broadcasts, record programmes from over 65 free-to-air channels, and create their own playlists and clip compilations. Content includes BBC One, BBC Two, BBC Four, ITV, Channel 4, Film4, 10 foreign language channels and more. This resource requires you to log in with your Oxford Single Sign-On via SOLO. Please note that access is provided under the terms and conditions of an ERA licence, which means that this resource is: a) To be used for non-commercial educational purposes only b) Available within the UK only.
The origins of the Refugee Studies Centre go back to 1982 when Dr Barbara Harrell-Bond was awarded a three-year Fellowship by the British Overseas Development Administration to undertake research on Ugandan refugees in Southern Sudan. One result of her study was the book Imposing Aid: Emergency Assistance to Refugees. Another outcome of the ODA award was the inspiration to establish, with the crucial assistance of Dr Ahmed Karadawi, an official unit at Queen Elizabeth House (now the Oxford Department of International Development) for the study of forced migration. The Refugee Studies Programme (RSP) was created in response to the neglect of the study of refugees within universities and to the need for accountability for the massive amount of funds spent on humanitarian assistance programmes. In 1987, the RSP began offering a nine-month Foundation Course on the Study of Forced Migration. Almost 450 Visiting Fellows and other students participated in this course up to June 1998. This course was then replaced by the MSc in Refugee and Forced Migration Studies. In January 2000 the RSP became the Refugee Studies Centre (RSC).

The purpose of the RSC is to carry out multi-disciplinary research and teaching in the field of forced migration and to encourage and facilitate the dissemination of research findings in this field to academics, policy-makers and practitioners. See the RSC website for more information.

RSC VISITING FELLOWSHIP PROGRAMME

Visiting Fellowships at the RSC are open to senior and mid-career practitioners and policy makers, professional academics, post-doctoral scholars, independent non-academic researchers, and PhD (DPhil) students who are working in fields related to forced migration, who wish to spend a period of study and reflection in a conducive academic environment, and to academics and other researchers. Each Fellow undertakes a specific programme of self-directed study of research, guided by an academic advisor. Fellowships are normally held over one term in the academic year, but in certain instances this can be extended. There will normally be no more than six Visiting Fellows in residence at the RSC at any one time.

Visiting Fellows have access to some of the University's academic facilities, including libraries, seminars, language laboratories and computer training courses. Fellows use the computers and desk space on the first floor of the RSC.
